A Hundred Thousand Dollars of Government Bonds Used to Speculate With.

PORT TOWNSEND, Wash., July 1.—Nearly $100,000 of government moneys it is alleged has been taken from the safe in the custom house here and used for private purposes by Collector of Customs Charles M. Bradshaw, during the period between March, 1890, and June 6, 1891.

On the latter date there was a deficiency of over $8,600 which Bradshaw had not replaced in the government safe. Bradshaw allowed Morey B. Sachs, judge of the superior court, who was tried at Olympia last winter on impeachment proceedings, to take from the government safe at one time $1,396, with which Sachs purchased opium at the United States marshal's sale, and which was afterward sold at a profit of over $400. At several other times Bradshaw gave to Sachs, from the government safe, large amounts of money.

FLAGS FOR WILLIAM

Amsterdam Does Honor to the Kaiser.

A Holiday With Bunting on All Sides.

Dionysius Causing Trouble in Bosnia.

Loyalty to the Czar Not Tolerated in Austria.

The Breech Between Viscount Cross and John Gorst Grows Wider Each Day—Miscellaneous Foreign Mention.

LONDON, July 1.—The Hohenzollern, bearing the imperial party, arrived at Amsterdam to-day. The Dutch fleet saluted the kaiser and the vessel, both of war and the merchant service, were gayly decorated, making a grand display. The emperor and the empress were received by the queen regent, who had sufficiently recovered from her recent illness to extend the hospitalities of the kingdom to the visitors in person. The imperial guests are spending the day visiting the national museum and other objects of interest in the capital.

This evening the Dam square in front of the palace will be illuminated by electric light and a concert given by massed military bands.

To-morrow evening there will be a naval display and an exhibition of fireworks superior to anything of the kind in many years. Nautical clubs are also organizing festivities, and altogether the citizens of Amsterdam seem bent on making the stay of the kaiser memorable. The kaiser and the kaiserine occupy a portion of the palace on Dam Square. The queen, Wilhemina, and the regent mother also have apartments in the palace.

A Paris dispatch says that some interest is felt there in the case of an Algerian on trial in New York as a "Jack the Ripper," the man having been honorably discharged from the French army, and the consul in New York has been directed to watch the proceedings and see that the man is protected in his legal rights.

Much bitterness has been aroused among members of the Greek church in Bosnia by the deposition of the metropolitan, Dionysius, by the Austrian government, for his devotion to the czar of Russia.

Dionysius taught his flock that the czar was their temporal and spiritual sovereign, and that no claim on their loyalty should be considered as superior to the czar.

Dionysius, having remained obstinate, notwithstanding repeated warnings, has been stripped of all his clerical estate and deposed from the office of exarch.

Count Kalnoky ordered this action to be taken as a notice that the Austro-Hungarian government would not tole ate any approach to disloyalty or any disposition to aggrandize Russia at the expense of the Austrian empire.

The breach between Viscount Cross and Sir John Gorst is far from being healed, notwithstanding the good offices of Lord Salisbury. The independent course of Sir John gives color to the report that he would sooner be out of the administration than in it, if he could get away without too much abruptness.

Sir John was seen yesterday, in the lobbies, conversing with Morley and other leading radicals, and the fact is considered significant in consequence of the persistence of Sir J[ohn] in the odious smile of a candid friend. The political secretary for India has been for some time past drifting away from his fellow tories, and even should he remain among them, he stands but little chance of future confidence.

Among the liberals he would receive a hearty welcome, both on account of his rugged sincerity, and his valuable knowledge of Indian affairs.

De Cobain, the Belfast M. P., will within a few days be expelled from parliament, unless he chooses to come forward and face his accusers. His whining letter in which he pretends sickness, as a reason for avoiding a trial on the charges against him, is not favorably received. De Cobain can only escape expulsion from parliament by appearing in person in court.

The Austrian government, it is stated in a dispatch from Vienna, is following in the footsteps of the German kaiser on the subject of labor reform. One of the measures which the government will earnestly support on the reassembling of the reichsrath provides for the creation of institutions tending to facilitate conciliation between employers of labor and their workmen. The bill provides for the appointment of workingmen's syndicates and for the establishment of boards of mediation. It is farther proposed to institute trade corporations among mining operatives.

THEY ARE BADLY SCARED.

Something Must be Done to Fix Up the Plate Printers.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—There is nothing especially new in the matter of the plate printers in the Bureau of engraving and printing. Hon. Dan J. Ryan and Hon. D. K. Watson arrived to-day from Columbus, but they made only a short stay. Both left for New York after spending a few hours here.

At the treasury department it was said that there was no change in the situation. Secretary Foster said he had no fear that the threats made by certain persons claiming to represent the Knights of Labor to make a fight against McKinley in Ohio on this issue would amount to anything. It was more apparent that the trouble was made by a few individuals, and that no harm would come from it.

The secretary expressed his determination to stand by Chief Meridith, whose course, he said, had been entirely satisfactory.

JORDAN'S DIVORCE.

His Schemes May Not Prove to be Law Proof.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 1.—James C. Jordan, the Boston millionaire, has been granted a divorce from his wife, Helen, on the ground of desertion. Mr. Jordon bought some property here a year ago to gain a residence so as to institute the proceedings. The evidence in the case was so meager that lawyers say the decree cannot stand if the defendant contests it.

The litigants agreed to separate three years ago, the wife being given certain valuable property and the control of two daughters. Jordan came west after this compact, but wrote his wife annulling the agreement and commanding her to come to San Francisco and resume marital relations. She refused and the divorce resulted.

Lorillard's Interests.

NEW YORK, July 1.—The property and busines of P. Lorillard & Co., the tobacco manufacturers, have been turned over to a stock company to be known as the P. Lorillard Co., with a capital of $5,000,000, of which $2,000,000 is preferred and entitled to 8 per cent. cumulative dividend and $3,000,000 common stock. The Lorillards are directors. The business was established in 1760 and the firm employs over 3,000 hands.

Another Ghost Story.

PHILADELPHIA, July 1.—The Inquirer publishes a special from Atlantic City, N. J., this morning stating that Gideon W. Marsh, ex-president of the Keystone bank, is hiding in Pleasantville, near Atlantic City, and that his family have been there with him a portion of the time since his flight. The United Press correspondent at Pleasantville in a message just received, says there is no truth whatever in the statement.

THE FREAK OF THE DAY.

A Man With Three Legs Attracting Attention.

He Has a Heart Six Times the Normal Size and is Puzzling the Physicians.

NEW YORK, July 1.—The medical and surgical staffs at Bellevue hospital are perplexed over the case of George Lippert, the man who has three perfect legs.

The case is so extraordinary that Dr. Overmiller, of East Thirtieth street, who has charge of it, decided on Saturday last to hold a scientific examination Wednesday, before the entire staff of the institution.

Lippert, however, has an eye to business, and when a museum manager offered him an engagement he did not hesitate to accept it. To-morrow he will begin the engagement.

Dr. Overmiller wished to learn, if possible, the explanation of the phenomenon. So, before Lippert accepted the engagement to pose as a "freak," the doctor persuaded him to appear at the hospital for the benefit of the faculty to-day. The result of the examination was astonishing.

It was found that Lippert's heart was six times the normal size. The doctors say they cannot understand how it is possible for a human to exist with such an unnaturally large heart.

Dr. Overmiller, after the examination of the man, said that his heart reached all over his breast. It beats as plainly on the right side as on the left, and it apparently extends the whole way across. One after another the doctors subjected Lippert to tests. He was pinched, pounded and punced. If his heart extended all through his breast, where could his lungs and other organs be?

It was agreed that no satisfactory explanation could be arrived at. As to his legs, it is altogether likely that he is the only "freak" of his kind. In most kindred human monstrosities the extra limb is useless and deformed. In Lippert's case all three limbs are good, and it is impossible to pick out what might be known as the extra one. Just as an animal takes alternate steps with its four legs, so does Lippert walk with his three. He could outrun any boy in the neighborhood where he was born, he says, and he used to enter races of all kinds, according to his story, and carry off the prize in "a walk."

The doctors believe he is telling the truth. His statements are declared possible upon examination of his physical condition, and his three-legged races, they say, are just as possible as his own existence.

Lippert was born in Frankfort, Germany. He has appeared before Emperor William, an honor rarely accorded "freaks." The emperor had heard of Lippert and he ordered the human curiosity before him and gave him a handsome present.

Bounty Certificates.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—Treasurer Nebeker to-day redeemed a $35 bond issued under the bounty land script act of February 11, 1847. The interest on the bond ceased in 1849. Under the bounty land script act any honorably discharged officer and soldier who served in the Mexican war for more than 12 months received at his option 160 acres of land or a certificate for $100. Those serving for a less period than 12 months and receiving an honorable discharge at option got 40 acres of land or a certificate of $25. Under this act certificates to the amount of $253,075 at 6 per cent. interest were issued. There are now outstanding about $500 in these certificates.

Sensational Turn in Brooklyn's Great Case.

Ascertained That Larbig, Who Was Murdered, Had His Life Insured for $15,000.

NEW YORK, July 1.—The latest developments in the Brooklyn tragedy is that Theodore Larbig, who was killed by Darwin J. Meserole, was heavily insured. It is said that sometime ago Larbig had his life insured for $15,000 in favor of Mrs. Comstock, who is now in jail as an accessory to the crime. It has been hinted as a possibility that the existence of the insurance policy might have served as a motive for getting Larbig out of the way. The district attorney refused to say if he intended to use the insurance policy story against Meserole and Mrs. Comstock at the trial.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—The President issued a proclamation to-day granting copyright privileges in the United States to citizens and subjects of Belgium, France, Great Britain and Switzerland.

Eight Were Drowned.

GLASGOW, July 1.—While a lug-sail boat was yesterday conveying a pleasure party across the bay of Ayr, from Largs to Rothesay, it capsized and eight persons were drowned.

GREAT IS THE OHIO MOUTH

Secretary Foster Has Been Talking Too Much.

The Cabinet Forced to Put a Governor on Him.

The Knights of Labor Are Making Things Warm Around the White House These Beautiful Days.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—Secretary Foster has succeeded in getting himself badly snarled in the case of the fight between the K. of L. in behalf of the discharged plate printers of the bureau of engraving and printing on the one hand and the treasury department and Chief Meredith on the other.

The executive board of the Knights of Labor, consisting of Messrs. Powderly, Hayes and Devlin, reached here yesterday, accompanied by Hugh Cavanaugh, a prominent knight from Cincinnati, who came in response to a telegram from Foster.

Cavanaugh went to the treasury department to sound Foster and the latter was inclined to "bluff" him. At any rate Powderly and Hayes left on the next train, the former for Harrisburg and the latter for Philadelphia.

Foster then went over to the White House steps and stopped to tell a group of newspaper men that the plate printers would not be reinstated.

His observations on the action of the knights were from the shoulder. He said that the Columbus correspondents had been playing havoc with the truth and that there would be no interference in the Ohio campaign. He went on to say that the knights had given their case away when they offered to let the charges against Meredith drop if the men were reinstated.

He concluded by saying that he didn't care whether the executive board called on him or not; that he adopted a policy and they could come to his terms or not as they chose.

A good deal of Foster's backbone seems to have been taken out of him at the cabinet meeting, however, as on his return he emulated Gen. Grosvenor's example, denied the interview, and requested the press associations not to send it out.

Later he had an interview with Mr. Devlin and Mr. Cavanaugh, at which he assured them that the interview "which would appear" in the evening Star was a fabrication.

What occurred subsequently is in dispute. Secretary Foster gave out before his departure from the city [illegible] before a settlement was arrived at a delegation representing the Federation of Labor stepped in and protested against discriminating against members of that organization who were on the "chance" list for the purpose of reinstating the Knights of Labor men.

Foster, according to his own account, then embraced the opportunity of unloading the controversy from his own shoulders onto the shoulders of the two labor organizations, telling them that they would have to settle the matter among themselves before he could take further action.

Mr. Devlin, however, informed your correspondent that a settlement had been reached satisfactory to the Knights of Labor, and that Secretary Foster and Capt. Meredith had signed a written agreement concerning the conditions.

What the terms of that agreement were he refused to make public. It is impossible to reconcile the two statements as Foster is out of town. Foster, however, made a grave mistake in repudiating the interview he gave out early in the day. It may prove as great a blunder as Gen. Grosvenor's immigration interview. The newspaper men say they will be able to clinch it and the Evening Star, which published it, will back it up with evidence. It will require all of Foster's ingenuity to extricate himself from the hole in which he has placed himself.

Killed by an Unknown Man.

ASHEVILLE, Tenn., July 1.—E. T. Mann, manager of the Shelley plantation, near Shelley station, Bolivar county, was murdered Saturday night. He was shot and killed by some unknown assassin while eating his supper. The fatal bullet was fired through the window.

HUNG UP BY THE HEELS,

And F[illegible] Full of Bullets and Shot.

Dan Buck, the Negro Burglar, Meets a Horrible Fate at the Hands of Georgia Lynchers.

ATLANTA, Ga., July 1.—News reached here last night of the lynching of a negro named Dan. Buck, at Bluffton, yesterday. Early yesterday morning the 15-year old daughter of a well-known citizen of the village of Bluffton, was awakened by a noise in her room. She screamed, and he fled. Buck was suspected, arrested and confessed. A party of 200 men took him from the jail, hanged him to a tree by his heels, and filled him with bullets and shot. There was not a place on his body an inch square that was not perforated.

Executed for Murder.

FT. SMITH, Ark., July 1.—Boudinot Crumpton, alias Bud Burris, was executed by the United States authorities in the jail yard here this morning for a murder committed in the Indian territory in 1889. The drop fell at 10:27 a. m. Crumpton died protesting his innocence. He attributed his downfall to whisky. He warned those present when they took a glass of liquor to look in it and they would see there the hangman's noose.

Guatemala News.

CITY OF MEXICO, July 1.—Dispatches received here from Guatemala says that the candidate for the presidency of the republic presented by the political clubs and the press are Gen. Jose Maria Rosia Barrios, Manuel Elizo Sanchez, Lorenzo Montufor, Francisco Lainfiesta, Gen. Henriquez and Gen. Basilio Arrogave.

President Barrios says he will not interfere in the coming elections and desires at the close of his term of office to deliver to his successor a peaceful and prosperous country.

The Emperor's Cruise.

LONDON, July 1.—The German emperor will, on the morning of July 10, visit the naval exhibition, after which he will start on a fortnight's cruise along the coast of Scotland. The emperor is a sailing member of the Royal Yacht club, and his yacht, the Meteor, formerly the Thistle, will compete for the Queen's cup in the Cowes regatta.

TO LOCATE A STATE CAMP.

The Commission Created by a Recent Law to Meet in Columbus.

COLUMBUS, O., July 1.—The commission appointed through a law enacted at the last session of the Legislature to secure a permanent camping ground for the Ohio National Guard, will meet in this city July 20.

The commission consists of Adjutant General Dill, Surgeon General Hart, of Wooster, and Senior Colonel Pocock, of Columbus. According to the law under which it is to act the commission must select a site at some point within a radius of fifty miles from Columbus.

It has no power to purchase land, but may receive donation and grant deeds for the same. It is understood that Newark, Licking county, will offer to donate about fifty acres of land and give other inducements to secure the location. A movement is to be instituted by citizens of Columbus, also with the same end in view.

AT SEA IN A DORY.

Capt. Andrews Spoken and He Complains of Weariness.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., July 1.—Capt. Enos, of the schooner Della F. Tarr, reports speaking the dory Mermaid, June 28, sixty three miles southeast by east from Highland Light.

Capt. Andrews reported being quite tired, having had no sleep for thirty-six hours, and asked to be reported. This is the first time he has been spoken by a passing vessel.

HOW BISMARCK FELL.

His Dismisal a Legacy from Emperor William.

The Once Great Ruler Was Too Haughty to Hold Office—A Scene at His Leaving.

LONDON, July 1.—The Times publishes the following interview which its correspondent, M. Blowitz, had with Count von Munster:

Count von Munster did not feel justified in making the story public before seeing how closely it would tread on the heels of the facts themselves. The count says that on the 19th of March last he called on Bismarck at Berlin, who told him he had resigned. At first the count was surprised, but recalling two scenes which he had witnessed, he understood how the emperor could have conceived and realized the idea of provoking and accepting the chancellor's retirement and what successor he would give him.

"I knew the young Emperor's perfect veneration for his grandfather," the Count said. "I put together this respectful homage and the first scene which my mind called up the year before his death. At a tea party the old Emperor raised his voice so as to be heard by me and others, and uttered the following words: 'Yes, I assure you you do not see things close at hand, but Bismarck has become very headstrong, and it takes all my strength of will to put up with him. But when I am driven to extremities and things cannot go on any further, the choice of his successor will not embarass me, for it is already settled in my mind. It will be General von Caprivi.'

"On the lady to whom he was speaking direct looking amazed at this name the Emperor William continued: 'Yes; he is a man not much known, but I have had him under my orders. I had often talked with him, and I assure you his appointment is the best choice to be made if it is ever necessary to part with Bismarck.'

"I was, therefore, almost convinced that General von Caprivi would arrive in office.

"While I was talking another of the emperor's conversations came to my mind. I remembered that a good while before the Emperor William I.'s death, he attended a punch given by his grandson, the present emperor, to officers of all arms. Prince Bismarck had shortly before appointed his son, Count Herbert, his secretary, minister of foreign affairs.

"The Emperor William I., speaking aloud, said: 'It must be allowed that this young Count Herbert has got on prodigiously fast under the rule of his father, and it is the greatest act of nepotism which politics has ever recorded.' I took the liberty of saying to the emperor: 'But how is it your majesty has not made the remark to him?' 'Why,' said the emperor, 'I cannot at this moment part with the prince; he is necessary to his country and is still necessary to me. I should readily have made the remark to him, but I reflected that since he does not feel the impropriety of these extraordinary promotions he could not take the remark coolly.'

"Reflecting on these two conversations of the Emperor William I., I was the less surprised both at Prince Bismark's resignation and at the young Emperor's resolution, for I saw that in accepting the resignation he had, as it were, followed the indications of his grandfather's desire. I rose and said to the Chancellor that as the Chamber was sitting I was going thither.

"The Prince replied: 'Wait a moment, I will put on my uniform and accompany you. He left the room, and a few minutes afterward I heard the Prince and Princess talking in loud tones. After this the Prince re-entered the room. He had not changed his dress. He held a large letter open in his hand.

"Coming up to me he said: 'I cannot accompany you. I have this moment received a letter from the young man, in which he informs me that he confers on me the title of Duke of Lauenburg. This plainly indicates that my resignation is definitive and my disgrace complete. I cannot accept this mocking dismissal. He will soon see that Bismarck is not to be dismissed in this style.' He then began walking up and down the room in great [illegible] threats, accusing everybody [illegible] raging against his adversaries.

"I [illegible] led that when he had received [illegible] talked with such philosophical [illegible]ion and dignity of his resignation, [illegible]d not believed that definitive, but [illegible]ithstanding all that had passed that [illegible]mperor would ask him to resume his [illegible] confess that I was then struck by [illegible]se and sadness, as I took leave of t[illegible]an who in the space of a single visit, had so strangely altered in my eyes."

It is a startling revelation to the world that Bismarck's downfall was not the work of the present emperor, but was a legacy left him by the man whom he placed upon the throne of United Germany.

Stark County Republicans.

CANTON, O., July 1.—At a meeting of the Republican county central committee, August 8 was chosen as the time of holding the Republican county convention at Canton. It was decided to select one delegate to each 100 votes or portion thereof above 50 cast for secretary of state last fall; also that each ward in Canton, Massillon and Alliance, and each township should choose their own delegation.

MARY ELLEN LEASE.

She Talks Plainly on the Death of Sam Wood.

NEW YORK, July 1.—A special to the World from Kansas City, Mo., gives an interview had with Mrs. Mary Ellen Lease, who is prominent in Alliance circles in Kansas, in which she says that the murder of Sam Wood is the work of the infamous republican crowd and that they have made three attempts upon her life by poisoning lemonade, but each time they failed. She also said that they were now trying to reach the mother through her children, referring to the arrest of her son, but she said he would be proven guiltless.

Mrs. Lease refused to enter into particulars of the alleged attempts to poison her, except that it was now being investigated and at the proper time the whole affair would be made public.

Naval Notes.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—The United States ship Pensacola, now at Callao has been ordered to the Mare Island navy yard, California, for repairs.

Admiral McCann will return to the U. S. by steamer and resume command of his proper station, the south Atlantic, from which he was orderdered to Chili to protect American interests when the revolution broke out there. This will leave Admiral Brown in command of the south Pacific station. He will probably remain in Chilian waters with the cruisers Baltimore and San Francisco.

Commander Robley D. Evans has been ordered to command the U. S. S. Yorktown, relieving commander Chadwick.

A Piece of Romance.

NEW YORK, July 1.—A special to the Herald from Norfolk, Va., says the story printed in a New York newspaper yesterday under the caption "Two Admirals at Odds," purporting to relate occurrences at Port au Prince, is purely romance. It does not contain a material statement that is not wholly untrue. Admiral Walker has never attempted to oust Admiral Gherardi from his command; is quite satisfied with the squadron of evolution, and is quite willing to leave the North Atlantic station and Hayden negotiations to Admiral Gherardi.

Lost in the Woods.

SARANAC INN, N. Y., July 1.—Samuel Myers, an employe of the new Adirondack & Lawrence railway, went away from his camp near here Sunday afternoon for a stroll and has not been heard from since. Fifty men with experienced guides have been searching the woods for Myers, but up to this time no trace has been found of him. Myers is well known and has a brother in Rutland, Vt., who has been notified of the disappearance.

Chauncey Will Not Sail.

NEW YORK, July 1.—Chauncey M. Depew will not sail for Europe to-day in the Teutonic, owing to the sudden and serious illness of his mother-in-law. It was hinted that the postponement had some political significance, but this Mr. Depew denied and said he was not a candidate for governor or any other political office. He regrets that he cannot start now but will go as soon as possible.

SHORT IN HIS ACCOUNTS,

And President Eltonhead Has Made Himself Scarce.

Experts Placed on His Books to Learn How the Fidelity Storage Company Stands.

PHILADELPHIA, July 1.—Edward Y. Eltonhead, who until a few weeks ago was president of the Fidelity storage and warehouse company, of 1817-23 Market street, has left this city and is said to be a defaulter for a large amount of money. The exact amount of the defalcation cannot be stated, but experts are at work on the books and have been for the past five days. They say they can make no statement for at least ten days. The charge that Eltonhead was a defaulter was made a few days after the present manager, Mr. Hoffman, took charge of the business. Experts were at once placed on the books, which, according to the statement of Manager Hoffman, are in a bad condition.

The Fidelity storage and warehouse company was established in 1887 with a capital stock of $500,000. Edward Y. Eltonhead was elected president after a contest. Shortly after he was made president his opponent, Mr. Craig made a charge against him of misappropriating some $3,000. It was claimed by Eltonhead's friends that all this money was properly accounted for. Mr. Craig finally sold his stock and got out of the company.

Manager Hoffman says that the company is doing a business of about $200,000 per year.

To Contest the Will.

All Sorts of Flags Once

...l sorts of flags were carried
Continentals—state flags, company flags, the rattlesnake ("Don't tread on me," and even "Unite or die" in some instances), the pine tree flag being used by the naval commanders. But the regulation flag, so far as there was one, seems to have been one of red and white stripes, with a cross or two of red and white in the "union." Finally, the idea of combining the stars and stripes was evolved, but not before many other designs had been suggested. Some of them were fantastical, embodying combinations of 13—for example, 13 lions, or elephants, or a chain of 13 links with a hand holding each link. The rattlesnake and the pine tree were pressed, but with less encouragement than might have been expected after the service they had rendered.

All sorts of arrangements in stars were proposed, the most picturesque being the poetical disposition of 13 stars in the order and relation of the 13 stars of the constellation Lyra, signifying harmony. We may never know how congress came to take the action which at last determined what our flag should be. It was not Washington's coat-of-arms which congress had in view, apparently, for the colors are different, and besides Washington would have methodically set down some allusion to it.

Mrs. Ross' Suggestion.

Washington is said, however, to have made the first working sketch of the first "Star Spangled Banner" in the back room of the upholstery establishment of Mrs. Ross, of Arch street, in Philadelphia, who made the first national flag under Washington's personal directions and afterward became flagmaker-in-general to the Government. It is to Mrs. Ross we are said to owe the fact that our stars are the five-pointed stars of the Continent and not the six pointed stars of England, she having suggested to Washington to change the design in this respect. Mrs. Ross was a Friend, but she did not have the scruples of her descendant, who gave up the inherited business of flagmaking for the Government, because the flag might be carried in battle to stimulate the combatants.

A PRONOUNCED FAILURE.

Wanamaker's Friends Go Back on Him.

As a Business Man in Politics He Has Been a Failure—Republican Leaders Greatly Annoyed.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—Republican leaders and politicians are said to be greatly annoyed over Postmaster General Wanamaker's connection with the Keystone bank transaction.

They are afraid it is going to injure the republican party in Pennsylvania at the next election.

A prominent Philadelphian, who occupies a lucrative position under the present administration, and who is one of the active managers of the republican forces in the Keystone state, surprised a party of his acquaintances last evening by declaring "John Wanamaker a failure as a representative business man in politics."

He then went on to review some of the difficulties the republicans in Pennsylvania had contended against during the past six years, but with great earnestness he said the Keystone bank scandal is a terrible blow to the party and Mr. Wanamaker's attitude is far from satisfactory from a party standpoint.

Should the existing feeling among the people of Philadelphia continue it is predicted that the democrats will probably carry the City of Brotherly Love at the next municipal contest by 30,000 majority.

There were several other prominent republicans present during the conversation, and they appeared to be very deeply impressed by the utterances of their Philadelphia friend.

Considerable surprise was expressed because the democratic press has not been more severe in its comments and criticisms upon the unfortunate predicament of the postmaster-general. During the Cleveland administration the republican press could not find words in the dictionary sufficiently strong to express their contempt and alleged horror for ex-Attorney-General Garland because of his connection with the Pan-Electric stock episode.

A representative of one of the leading republican papers was forced to remark: "I cannot understand why the democratic press should be so generous with Mr. Wanamaker. His offense on its face is far more reprehensible than Mr. Garland's connection with the Pan Electric incident."

Since the disclosures in connection with the Keystone bank Mr. Wanamaker appears to be a greatly changed man. He no longer bounds up the stairway at the executive mansion, on his way to cabinet meetings, two steps at a jump, but his gait is less vigorous and the expression on his face more drawn and serious.

He formerly had a pleasant smile and cheerful remark for almost everyone he met at the white house. Now trouble is marked on his features, and as soon as his cabinet duties are over he enters his closed carriage, adjusts his eyeglasses and draws from his pocket a newspaper, which he proceeds to read intently while he is being driven either home to luncheon or back to his desk in the postoffice department.

Defiance County Has Not Yet Been Harmonized.

The B. and O. Shops Causing Considerable Comment.

Lawn Fete to Be Given by the Ladies—Personal Mention of Interest to Readers of the Bee.

DEFIANCE, O., July 1.—(Special)—The exclusive announcement in yesterday's BEE relative to the locating of the B. & O. shops at this place has caused more than ordinary comment, and it is now probable that steps will at once be taken toward securing the enterprise.

For some time past the B. & O. people have seen the necessity of moving their shops, and as there is no better place in the state than Defiance they naturally looked favorably upon this point.

The present headquarters, Garret, Ind., is what might be properly termed a mere hole in the ground, and it has been almost an impossibility for the company to keep their workmen there any length of time. They have looked forward to the removal for many months, but there was no definite action taken until some days since.

Those familiar with the affair say that the company has been negotiating for 500 acres of land just south of the B. & O. depot here, and that the deal whereby this land was sold was practically settled recently. It is claimed that a capitalist from Columbus, O., bought the property for $30,000 and that it will be turned over to the railroad company at the proper time.

Probably one of the most plausible stories which leads many to believe that shops will be closed here is the fact that the railroad is company at present without a direct southern terminus.

This can be accomplished in one way, and a way, too, that will make Defiance the southern terminus of the road, thereby securing the shops without a doubt.

Work on the C., L. & W. road which was commenced some time ago, has been suspended owing to the financial condition of the owner. It was the original intention of this company to build the line direct to Columbus, but as has been previously stated money prevented the projectors in so doing.

This road is graded from here to Lima; the telegraph poles and wires have all been strung, and ties have been distributed almost the entire distance.

It is stated with some degree of authority that the B. & O. intends gobbling up this defunct line and finish the work as rapidly as possible. In this event it will give the company a shorter line to Columbus and will pass through the best territory in Southern Ohio.

It will have a tendency, too, of opening up territory which will not only increase the business of the railroad but also greatly improve Defiance as a railroad center. The chances for all these valuable improvements are exceedingly propitious and the BEE sincerely hopes to record this matter under more flattering auspices at no distant date.

They Are After Him.

Two weeks ago, it will be remembered, the BEE published a somewhat lengthy article on the Neal-Campbell war, which unfortunately still exists. In the same issue it made mention of the fact that the democratic convention had indorsed Campbell's administration.

As a matter of course it was impossible after reading both articles to tell the true situation, and all sorts of rumors were immediately sprung upon the public.

The BEE stated that there were many Neal men in this county, and it repeats the same to-day. The mere fact that the convention indorsed Gov. Campbell is not evidence that they are all his followers.

Your correspondent has talked with several parties here who voted for the Campbell indorsement, and they expressed themselves as being opposed to his second term.

There is not very much activity among the local trustees notwithstanding that the democratic state convention will be held on the 10th and that the two gladiators Neal and Campbell, will appear in the arena to end this great contest. Owing to the fact that the democratic county convention adjourned without selecting delegates it will be necessary to call a mass meeting to name the chosen few.

In speaking of the matter one of Larry Neal's followers said: "The democratic central committee, I believe, are for Campbell. I have been informed that they intend calling a mass convention two days before the state convention. If this is done all of the farmers will not attend as it will be an impossibility for them to leave their work.

"Then the Campbell men will have everything their own way, thus securing a solid delegation. I am, however, keeping an eagle eye on their movements and they may yet meet defeat."

The Ladies Will Entertain.

To-morrow evening the ladies of Grace Episcopal church will hold a lawn fete at the church grounds, and arrangements are now in progress to make it as enjoyable as possible. Several new features, which have been carefully arranged by the ladies, will be introduced, and aside from this ice cream, berries, coffee and sandwiches will be served. There is no doubt but that the event will be a grand success, as the ladies of the Episcopal church are noted for affairs of this kind.

Interesting Notes Gathered in the Brilliant City.

FINDLAY, July 1.—(Special)—Hugh W. McMurray, a boiler-maker residing on West Main Cross street, made an unsuccessful attempt at suicide yesterday afternoon by cutting a horrible gash in his throat with a razor. He would have bled to death if his family had not discovered him in time to call a physician.

It is thought the unfortunate man has been partially deranged since the extreme heat of the past few days. He is now perfectly sane and is unable to account for his rash act.

Sudden Death.

John Nill, a bartender for Jacob Franks, on West Front street, died very suddenly at his home on Liberty street yesterday afternoon of heart failure, aged 44 years. He was sick less than 24 hours. Deceased leaves a wife and two children.

The Morgan Trial.

Five of the Oman family on the witness stand thus far in the trial of Chas. Morgan, swear they positively identified the defendant on the night of the robbery.

The jury was taken out yesterday afternoon to carefully examine the house and premises where the robbery was committed in Eagle township. The state appears to be making a stronger trial than they did on the first one. The case will occupy the entire week.

FIGURING FOR HIS PARTY,

Rather Than Working for the Country's Good.

Such are the Charges Made Against Superintendent Porter by Those in a Position to Know.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—After the 1st of July every division of the census office will practically come to a halt, and the entire force of the office will be set to work hurrying up the population record. The reason for dropping every other branch of the bureau is because President Harrison has requested Superintendent of the Census Porter to have the work of population completed and delivered to him by not later than the 1st of March next.

He will then submit the record of population with a special message to congress.

The appropriation for the census office is very low, and in order to comply with the president's request the other divisions of the office must suspend operations till congress rushes through a deficiency appropriation next December.

There is some talk, however, that a proposition will be made that the clerks continue certain work and wait for congress to reimburse them. That the bureau has been worked for partisan purposes is believed by those who observed the methods of the office.

Already some of the secrets of the office have leaked out, and the democratic house next December may ask Mr. Porter where he obtained authority for using the force of the census office as an adjunct to the republican national executive committee.

The special agents connected with the population division, it is intimated, have done some very valuable work that will prove of great assistance to the republican party in the next presidential campaign.

For instance, it is said information has been obtained which gives the names of officers connected with every variety of farmers' organizations throughout the United States. There is not a farmers' organization of any description in the various counties and townships in the country, it is said, but what the census office has secured the name of the president, vice president, secretary and treasurer and the list of members and their address.

It is said information has also been obtained relating to labor organizations and trades unions. This information, it can be readily seen, will prove invaluable to the republican national executive committee.

The republican managers will know who to approach, they will know the strength of the democrats in the different farming communities and will have a decided advantage in the campaign. And all this information, it is charged, has been secured at the expense of the people.

BUILD THEM A HOUSE.

Fulton County's Poor are Suffering for Shelter.

They Have to Move Their Beds to Keep the Rain from Pouring Down on Them.

WAUSEON, July 1—(Special).—Secretary John G. Doren of the state board of charities was here yesterday and took a trip to the county infirmary where he made a thorough investigation of the affairs of that institution.

Mr. Dorem stated to the BEE corr espondent that from what he had seen of our "Home for the Poor" one would suppose that the people of Fulton county were not civilized beings. Replying to a query as to the management of the institution he replied, "Good; better than could be expected under the circumstances. Why, it is a model of good house keeping and cleanliness, and right there is where you will please make the distinction,—you may say it is not the managers but the people who are responsible for the present condition of affairs. It is the buildings of which I complain. They are simply wretched, and are unfit for human habitation. I saw people advanced in years living in rooms through the roof of which the rain leaked. It is a pitiable condition for things to be in, but it is a fact that some are obliged to move their beds to keep out of the wet.

"When your people voted three years ago against the erection of new infirmary buildings, they committed a shameful act—a disgrace to your county, and one for which every citizen is responsible."

How about your report, what about the tenor of it? "When we issue our next annual report I don't see how we can say anything complimentary of the institution except as to its management."

THE FLOUR CITY LIFE.

A Mixed Up State of Affairs in Rochester.

A Move to Consolidate the Company With the Life Union of New York City.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., July 1. — Ralph Marden, who has assumed the duties of secretary of the Flour City Life association, said this morning: "I had hoped this matter would be kept quiet. I don't wish to say anything against or in behalf of the officials against whom charges are made. It is none of my funeral, and I am glad of it.

Mr. Underhill's resignation not having been accepted yet he is still president of the association.

We are winding up the affairs of the company, and on Friday a meeting of all members will be held to vote on the question of merging with the Life Union, of New York city. The office will be moved to New York next week, and branch offices will be established here. The members at the annual meeting last May adopted resolutions expressing full confidence in all the officers and in all affairs of the company.

Mr. Marden was treasurer of the association until lately.

A reporter called at the headquarters of the Flour City Life association and tried the several doors to the offices, but found them locked. The president's private office was locked. The offices of the secretary and cashier were open and at a desk in the latter office a young man was sitting, who said that the president, Mr. Underhill, was not in town and he did not know when he would return.

"Who is secretary of the association?"

"Ralph Marden."

"And is he also secretary of the Life Union of New York?"

"Yes."

Just then another man came in and the young man at the desk turned to him and said: "You're adjuster of this company?"

"Yes," said the new-comer. "It was W. H. Colvin, whose name is on one of the office doors as 'superintendent of the death claim department.'" The reporter asked Mr. Colvin if he had heard that the president, adjuster and secretary of the company, had been indicted. Mr. Colvin replied: "The company was never in better shape than to-day. We are taking care of the losses and everything is satisfactory. The assessments are coming in and our agents report good business."

"Where are the president and secretary?"

"They are in New York, but will be back Friday."

"You have not heard of indictments being found against you?"

"Nothing at all."

"What is the Life Union, of New York?"

"It is a straight company and has offices in New York."

"How long has the Flour City Life association been in operation?"

"Four years in August. We settle every 60 days all claims against the company. Next month we pay again—that's what this assessment is coming for."

Two young women had just paid money to the cashier.

Mrs. Howell, of Cincinnati, said that she had seen a photograph of Howell sent by the police authorities of this city and recognized her husband.

The Endowment Fund is Melting Away.

It Has Been Raised to Pay the Running Expenses of the Institution—Loose Business Methods.

CLEVELAND, O., July 1.—The friends and trustees of Kenyon college, the old and wealthy Episcopal institution at Gambier, Ohio, are greatly excited over the discovery that $21,000 of the endowment fund have been used to meet the running expenses of the college. For several years the treasurer's reports have shown small deficits, but no one was aware that trust funds had been impaired.

Investigation shows that careless business methods have been in vogue, no distinction being made between the interest and principal when loans were returned to the treasurer.

The trustees are personally liable, and may be required to make up the loss. The college has been taken from the control of the bishop of Ohio and Prof. Sterling, LL. D., became president temporarily, vice Dr. W. B. Bodine.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, causing distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet efficiently. It tones the stomach, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, banishes headache, and refreshes the mind.

Distress After Eating Sick Headache Heart-burn Sour Stomach

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. After eating I would have a faint or tired, all gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble was aggravated by my business, painting. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, which did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." GEORGE A. 100 Doses One Dollar

Five Dollars a Month

The Nominal Fee Charged by Drs. Copeland and Buffett.

In order to place the skill of Drs. Copeland and Buffett within the reach of all they make the following liberal offer: For one month beginning June 17th, their charges for treating all diseases will be $5 a month. All persons calling on them from that date up to July 17th can obtain examination, treatment and medicine for this nominal fee. Under no circumstances will a larger amount be charged or accepted. All are cordialy welcome during office hours.

The Copeland Institute is permanently located in the city; leases and contracts are for a term of two years, and the elegantly appointed offices at 706 Madison street speak well for the solidity of the business.

Summer being the time most favorable to the speedy and most certain cure of catarrh, and that being the very time when sufferers are most apt to neglect the disease because it then troubles them the least the nominal charge of $5 a month for medicines and treatment will encourage all to avail themselves of the time and the opportunity.

"MY LIFE WAS SAVED."

A Lady Who is Ready to Testify to the Remarkable Result in Her Case.

"They saved my life: that is what Dr. Copeland and associates did for me, and I am ready to testify to the fact at any time."

The lady who made the above remark was Miss Bessie J. Owens, of No. 95 Smith street, Incinnati.

"My family, in fact everybody who knew me, did not believe that I would live long," continued Miss Owens, "and I do not believe that I would be alive to-day if I had not gone to Dr. Copeland and associates.

MISS BESSIE J. OWENS, 95 SMITH STREET.

"My trouble first made its appearance about two years ago. I was taken the worst about last September. It began with a miserable pain in my back. I could not straighten up. I was in that condition for two weeks. I tried three different physicians, but grew worse instead of better. I became so bloated that I could not lie down in bed. I was compelled to sit up in a chair, or

WALK THE FLOOR

And rub myself constantly. I had a continual pain in my limbs, and was chilly all the time. No matter how many covers I piled on me, I was still cold.

"My nose was always stopped up. The mucus dropped back into my throat and nearly strangled me. At times I could scarcely breathe at all. My head ached constantly. Indeed, I never knew what it was to be without an ache or pain of some kind. I had a dry, hacking cough. I would often have terrible coughing spells. It seemed as if my chest was being torn and lacerated. How I suffered no one can imagine. One day was simply a repetition of the one gone before. I dreaded to see night come. I could not sleep. As soon as I would lie down I and would have to sit up and cough and raise to obtain relief. I was glad to see the dawn of the coming day.

"I had no appetite. What little I ate I had to force down, and then it caused me great distress. A drink of water would simply draw me double. I seemed to be perfectly paralyzed from the strong medicine I had taken.

"I had no rest until I went to Dr. Copeland and associates on February 14. They seemed to understand my case exactly, and the very first treatment gave me relief. I improved steadily, until now I am as well as I ever was. I can eat and sleep well. Have no more headaches. In fact every symptom has left me. The gentlemen saved my life, and I will tell it to any one who may call on me at my home, No. 95 Smith street."

e Delegates Out on an Excursion To-Day—Notes and Gossip of the Meeting.

RTAINLY the convention has thus far been most successful. The large church has n filled to its utmost capacity at each ssion—especially was this so last even- . The church was handsomely deco- ted. After the singing of the song of lcome by the large chorus, a black cur- in was drawn directly over the pulpit closing the words "We Welcome You" large illuminated letters. It was a vel surprise.

ev. Dr. Williams made an eloquent dress of welcome, which was aptly re- onded to by the state president, W. F. McCauley, of Dayton. Prof. Antioch Russell Wells, of Yellow Springs, read an interesting paper on the value of expres- sion.

The sunrise prayer meeting at 6:15 o'clock this morning was largely attended. Marion Lawrance acted as conductor.

The regular morning session was opened by a praise and prayer service at 9 o'clock.

Norman S. Lewis, of Toledo, treasurer and secretary, presented his reports. They showed the receipts to have been $293.37, expenditures $225.62, balance $67.75.

There are 828 societies in the state representing 17 denominations. Of this number 179 societies are in the Presbyterian church, 139 in the Congregational, 84 in the Methodist Episcopal, 65, Christian; 64, Baptist; 34, Disciple; 32, Methodist Protestant; 28, United Presbyterian; 23, Lutheran; 22, Reformed; 20, United Brethren; 23, scattered.

There are 48 union societies, 53 undenominational societies and 30 junior societies. The total active membership in the state is 30,015 and the associate membership 8,073.

The state president, W. F. McCauley, addressed the convention. He spoke of the rapid growth of the society in the state. "It is not a spasmodic growth," he said, "that will go into a decline, but a growth that is to continue ever onward. We have taken the bushel off our lights, and God grant that they may burn long and bright."

Rev. Mr. Werk made a motion that the free entertainment of delegates to the state convention be limited to one delegate from each county. The motion was carried.

The following committee was appointed on nominations: Methodist Protestant, Mrs. J. H. Alley; Christian, Mr. Worrell; Methodist Episcopal, Mr. Arbuckle; United Brethren, G. P. Macklin; Baptist, F. C. Hackett; Presbyterian, Miss McClure; Reformed, Howard Shoemaker; Disciple, Miss Carrie Meredith; Congregational, Rev. D. Fisher.

Mr. Maklin, of Greenville, O., delivered a very interesting address on "The Value ing."

MR. BAER IS HERE.

The General Secretary Captures Them All—A Brief Sketch of His Life.

John Willis Baer, of Boston, the general secretary of the society, arrived in Toledo last evening and was present at the mammoth meeting. He is a young man, having been born March 2, 1861, in Rochester, Minn. When he was quite young his parents removed to Cleveland, where he resided for some eighteen years, and, as he said last evening, "Although I was born a Gopher I am pretty much a Buckeye after all, even if I do live in cultured Boston where they know how to turn the bean."

At 18 years of age he left Ohio and returned to Rochester, where, with the exception of two years spent in the newspaper business at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, he resided until 1891, when the trustees of the United Society of Christian Endeavor called him to take an important position in the furtherance of Christian endeavor work.

As general secretary it is his special duty to act in the organizing, systematizing and conserving of the work at home and in the field, and that means a busy life and crowding duties. Mr. Baer travels all over the country and is more competent to judge and speak of the Y. P. S. C. E. than any other person connected with it.

He made a brilliant address last evening. Said he: "In my travels around the country the Christian Endeavor movement is a series of surprises to me, its rapid growth, the work accomplished and the enthusiasm displayed. We are now an army numbering over 1,000,000 young people, comprising 16,000 societies. We are not confined to the United States, but can count our forces all over the civilized world. There are 1,000 societies in Canada, 120 in England, 82 in far away Australia, and so on without seeming end. If the great army were to pass before you you would see almond eyes, yellow skins, strange faces of races you had never seen before and hear languages that you could not understand; the banners would all bear strange devices in stranger characters, still it would all mean the same, 'For Christ and the church.'

"We are not hurrah boys with colored badges, but earnest, zealous workers accomplishing a great good in the field we have chosen. Last year alone $25,000 young people, to my knowledge, joined churches through the efforts of our society. That is certainly a record of which to be proud. This year 5,000 new societies were organized."

Mr. Baer told numerous laughable anecdotes, and made a brilliant address. He is one of the best public speakers that has been in Toledo for some time. His presence was certainly a treat.

THE FOUNDER

Of the Y. P. S. C. E.—A Few Words About Rev. F. E. Clark.

Last evening General Secretary Baer said that he left the president, Rev. F. E.

THE FOUNDER, REV. F. E. CLARK.

Clark, the previous afternoon, and that gentleman as he was saying good bye said: "Tell the people of Ohio that had I been home longer from the old country I would have been with them at their convention this year. Tell them too that next year will find me in Ohio."

Rev. F. E. Clark, the founder of the Christian Endeavor movement, first saw the light up in Aylmer, Quebec, along in September, 1851. His parents hailed from New England, as did his ancestors for generations back. Mr. Clark graduated from Dartmouth college in 1873, and then took the regular theological course at Andover seminary. His first charge was Williston church, Portland, Me., and there it was that the Christian endeavor movement had its birth. From Williston church, Dr. Clark was called to become the pastor of Phillip's church, South Boston, in 1883, succeeding Dr. R. R. Merdith, of Sunday school fame.

This is one of the largest churches in Boston and 400 members were added to its congregation during his pastorate. In 1887 he was chosen president of the united society and editor of the Golden Rule, the organ of the societies. These duties fully occupy his time.

INSURED FOR FIVE MILLION.

The Remains of James McHenry Exhumed.

Insurance Companies Trying to Prove That He Came to Death by His Own Hand.

LONDON, July 1.—It is now said that the late Mr. James McHenry, the well known financier and old-time Erie railroad litigant, whose body was exhumed June 20 by order of Home Secretary Matthews, was insured in England and the United States for over $5,000,000.

The insurance companies, it is added, suspect that Mr. McHenry committed suicide by poison, thus rendering void the insurance policies on his life.

The body has been re-interred after being subjected to a careful post-mortem examination, the intestines, etc., remaining in the possession of the officers of the home office.

It was intended to conceal the exhumation until the result of the analysis of the contents and condition of the stomach was made known, and in fact, if the examination had resulted in showing that Mr. McHenry's death was not caused by poison, it is more than probable that the government officers and others would have kept the matter a secret. Mr. McHenry's friends scout the idea of suicide and are indignant at the publicity which the affair has now attained.

It is expected that the analysis of the dead man's stomach will not be completed before the end of the week. The names of the United States life insurance companies interested in the examination now in progress are not mentioned.

The probate of Mr. McHenry's will has been granted. The executors are Mr. McDermott, a journalist of London, and Mr. Boyd, a provision merchant of Belfast.

The value of the personal estate, as far as at present ascertained, is sworn at £1,457. The testator empowers the executors to retain in their present state his investments, however doubtful or hazardous they appear, but in the exercise of this discretion to consult his friend, James Reilly, of New York.

He bequeaths to Mr. Reilly, Mrs. John Bellanger Cox and Miss Annie Boyd each one-quarter and the executors one-eighth of his property, which is reported as worth £1,500,000.

Dead in His Cell.

VINCENNES, Ind., July 1.—William Sachs, an insane saloon-keeper who created a stampede at the Christian church Sunday last, and was subsequently taken to jail, was this morning found dead in his cell, divested of all clothing. A post-mortem examination revealed that his death was caused by apoplexy produced from the bursting of a blood vessel in his brain. The deal man is the father of Lydia Sta[illegible] Wells, the actress.

Will Pay Fifty Per Cent.

PHILADELPHIA, July 1.—Gen. Fisher, receiver of the Spring Garden National bank, said yesterday that the estimate made some time ago that the assets of the bank would pay upwards of 30 per cent appears to be verified.

CHECKED HER BABY.

A Peculiar and Troublesome Bundle Left in the Check Room Last Evening.

A check room has been provided in the church parlors. Almost everything imaginable is checked. The climax was capped last evening when a woman rushed in with a baby and had it checked. She went up stairs, and shortly afterward the little bundle commenced squalling in seven different keys. The boys didn't know what to do. They turned it over, looked to see if there were any pins sticking in it, tried to find some milk, dangled playthings in front of its eyes, all to no purpose, the child was startled for keeps. At last word was sent up stairs and it was announced in the convention that there was a baby in the check room that wanted its mother. This created a big laugh. The mother sought her child, pressed it to her bosom, quiet reigned once more and the convention proceeded.

Here and There in the Convention

About thirty delegates took a trip to the asylum this morning after the sunrise service.

Will L. Hartman, of the Allentown, Pa., Daily Item, is in attendance at the convention of Y. P. S. C. E.

Early cars were run this morning to bring the delegates to the sunrise prayer meeting at 6:15 o'clock.

Extra cars were chartered for the delegates yesterday, on the consolidated electric line from the Union depot.

It is said that a great many delegates returned to their homes on account of the trouble to secure places to receive them.

Frank Davis, of Sandusky, and Miss Abbie Griswold, of Cleveland, have been appointed assistant secretaries of the convention.

A box containing Cincinnati badges was lost at the Union depot. The finder can return it to the First Congregational church.

Miss Mary Kennedy, of Bellefontaine, read a paper yesterday afternoon on the subject, "How Can Society be Made to Lead People to Christ?"

L. D. Denny, Cleveland; Rev. B. M. Brice, H. L. Brown, Tiffin, and Mr. Turnbull, Alliance, compose the committee on resolutions and business.

This evening an overflow meeting will be held at St. Paul's church. The speakers will go from one church to the other and at both the exercises will be interesting.

Last evening after the meeting delegates who were unassigned met in the parlors and the Toledo members and friends present found places for them in short order.

A delegate's satchel was lost on the East Side, corner Clark and Navarre avenue. The gentleman who picked it up has been looking for the owner, and if he will leave it at First Congregational church in the press committee room the owner, B. M. Brice, will call for it.

C. L. Werk and Forest Hubbell, of Urbana; Dwight Smith, Mansfield; Miss Jennie Burns, Canton; Miss Rhoades, Fostoria; Miss Lora Edwards, Cleveland; Miss Julia Travers, Painesville; Dr. H. W. Pierson, Akron, have been appointed a committee on place of meeting for the next convention.

Yesterday afternoon Prof. T. H. Sonnedecker, of Tiffin, spoke on the subject, "God's plan of society." He said it was natural for people to form themselves into societies. We are not a race of hermits. Man is a social being, and in society one who has a positive influence will draw men together for good.

Miss Enid Ware, of Machanicsville, read an interesting paper on Sociability in the Church yesterday afternoon. She argued that every kindly word and handshake with a stranger in the church brought him so much nearer and made him feel that he was welcome and not an interloper. This friendliness with strangers should be cultivated.

Tickets for the excursion this afternoon were given to the members of the reception committee, and also to the Y. M. C. A. Juniors' reception committee, the members of which have been so faithful in assisting the reception committee in escorting the delegates to their places of residence.

Delegates were asked this morning to sign a pledge for their society, to give $1 to pay the expenses of the next convention. Delegates who did not desire to take upon themselves the responsibility of signing were instructed to take the pledges home and bring the matter up before the local societies.

Miss Emma Myers, of Toledo, talked interestingly yesterday afternoon on "How to Manage a Christian Endeavor Social." She said that there should be a social feature of the work as this elevates the keeps the young folks together, and gives the necessary recreation.

At some places where they had agreed to take delegates the visitors were told that they could not be accommodated on account of sickness in the family or unexpected company. These people should have given the committee due notice of their inability to receive delegates, or should have found other places for them.

FOUND HIS POCKET-BOOK.

A Car Cleaner Picks Up Three Thousand Dollars.

COLUMBUS, July 1.—A pocket-book containing $3,000 in drafts and $150 in cash, the property of Mr. J. C. Thompson, now visiting friends in this city, and which was supposed to have been stolen in Portland, Or., has been found by a car cleaner after a 3,000 mile journey in a Pullman car.

Mr. Thompson is a resident of Salem, Or., and with several others composing a party to come east, visited Portland on the day of the reception to President Harrison.

Pickpockets did a thriving business that day and a couple of those who intended to make the journey were obliged to return to their homes after being robbed.

Mr. Thompson missed his pocketbook, but had his ticket in another pocket, and Mrs. Thompson, having sufficient cash with her to defray expenses until reaching this city, they concluded to continue on the trip.

No idea was entertained of ever hearing from the pocketbook, but the owner was surprised yesterday by receiving a letter from his son stating that the Pullman company had advised him that it had been found by a car cleaner in St. Louis, and awaited identification at their office.

The book had evidently been dropped in the Pullman, but how it escaped the notice of the porter and the passengers until it reached the St. Louis yards is a mystery not easily solved.

DRAWING TO A CLOSE.

Kuhns' Defense Has Been Completed.

The State Introducing Evidence in Rebuttal—May Go to the Jury on Friday.

TIFFIN, O., July 1.—(Special)—Owing to the failure of an important witness to appear, the proceedings in the Kuhn trial yesterday afternoon were unimportant.

But one witness was examined, and he in regard to the condition of the blood in the pool found near the scene of the murder.

Witness saw the blood on Wednesday three days after the murder and gave it as his opinion that it had not been there more than 24 hours.

This morning Mrs. Lottie Furguson, of Prospect, the missing witness, appeared and was on the stand all the forenoon. She is the wife of Elton Furguson, a former witness, and the keeper of the hotel at Prospect.

The witness swore positively that it was on the Thursday preceding the Sunday of the murder that Kuhns was there. For three hours she was put through a most rigid and searching cross-examination, but her story remained unweakened in a material part. This closed the case for the defense, and this afternoon the state is engaged in rebuttal.

It is expected the case will reach the jury by Saturday morning.

FLOATING BALL OF FIRE.

Mysterious Things Seen by the People of Allen County.

ST. MARY'S, July 1.—The whole country around Spencerville, a village fourteen miles north of this city, is torn up with feverish excitement over a strange and unnatural apparition which puts in an appearance regular every night.

The unwelcome phenomenon is seen near Conant, and the people there think it is a heavenly visitor. The mysterious object resembles a large ball of fire, and emits a very bright ligat.

It is about two feet in diameter and seems to be flat upon the bottom, with an oval-shapped top, the color being a blood red.

At times the uncanny apparation may be seen floating a few feet above the ground, then suddenly shoots upward toward heaven.

The first appearance of the strange light was noticed about two years ago, but has been more frequently seen within the last two months. Some superstitious people, coming from a distance, are almost scared to death by the mysterious visitor suddenly looming up before them, then disappearing for a short time, before long to be seen again in the distance.

Thousands of people watch the phenomenon nigutly, and in the vicinity where it generally puts in an appearance, the people are so terror-stricken that they are afriad of venturing to bed when night comes.

Fast Trip.

Capt James Cunningham, of this city, commander of the steamer C. F Curtis, has broken the record in a round trip between Buffalo and Milwaukee. With his steamer and three barges in tow, each carrying 1,100 tons of coal, he went to Milwaukee, unloaded, then loaded lumber at Menominee, and returned to Buffalo, making the entire trip in 16½ days, thus beating a previous record by over five days.

Coal and Ore Charters.

Coal charters: Prop S J Macy and schooner Mabel Wilson, Toledo to Gladstone, 45 cents; Props Panther, Iron Duke and T W Palmer, Toledo to Duluth, 50 cents; Schr Iron State, Toledo to Ashland, 50 cents. The propeller W H Barnum and Schr Galatea have been chartered to carry ore from Escanaba to Lake Erie ports at 65 cents. The Prop Ioseo will carry ore from Ashland to Lake Erie Ports on contract. The Schr Arthur will bring hard coal from Buffalo to Toledo at 30 cents.

Bids on Four Light Ships.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—Yesterday bids were opened at the office of the Lighthouse Board for the construction of four lighthouse tender vessels for service on the Atlantic coast. The vessels are designated respectively as numbers 51, 52, 53, and 54.

The Eastern bidders were Charles Reeder & Sons, Baltimore; Harrison Loring, Boston; Samuel L. Moore & Sons Company, Elizabeth, N. J., and Pusey & Jones, Wilmington, Del. All these bids were higher than those from shipbuilders at the lake ports.

David Bell, Buffalo, bid only on No. 51, $45,-000.

The Union Dry Dock Company, of Buffalo, bid respectively for the four vessels $40,000, $65,-000, $67,000, and 67,000, or $259,000 for all four.

The Cleveland Ship-building Company bid $61,000 each, or $240,000 for the four.

The Craig Ship-building Company, of Toledo, bid $52,738, $56,338, $56,338, and $56,338, or $199,-950 for all of them.

The Detroit Dry Dock Company bid in a lump $220,000 for all of them.

The lowest bidders were F. W. Wheeler & Co., West Bay City, Mich. Their figures were $47,-900, $48,000, $48,100, and $48,100, or for the four $189,900.

The officers of the lighthouse board said that Wheeler & Co. were good and responsible bidders, and as their figures were the lowest the contract would no doubt be awarded them. The formal decision will not be made for some days.

By this it will be seen that Craig, of Toledo, bid next to the lowest and these two bids were very close.

Flanking the Strikers.

CHICAGO, July 1.—The general managers of the lake and rail lines made a flank move yesterday at their meeting in Buffalo on the striking longshoremen in this city. Late yesterday afternoon telegrams were received by the Chicago line agents that it had been decided to send freight by all rail until the strike is over.

The agents here say they have the best of the fight. Business is moving not so smoothly as before. The men hired by the month, with a few men picked up here and there, are at work under police protection.

Some of the lines are increasing the number of their men on monthly wages and the strike may result in doing away with the piling of men by the hour.

FOR ATTORNEY-GENERAL, J. W. CANARY.

Northwestern Ohio will present the name of Hon. John W. Canary, of Bowling Green, to the democratic state convention, as a candidate for attorney-general.

As yet no name has been mentioned in connection with this nomination, and so far as is known Mr. Canary has the field to himself. This democratic section of the state of Ohio will ask for Mr. Canary's nomination, certain that its unswerving allegiance to the party and its principles entitles it to recognition.

Mr. Canary is one of the brightest lawyers in the state, an honor to the bar of Wood county, and an ornament to the profession at large. His democracy is unquestioned, and his private and public records are without blemish. He is a learned lawyer, one of the most forcible speakers on any subject in Ohio. If nominated he would make an active and aggressive canvass, and if elected would give to the office of attorney-general becoming dignity.

His friends most respectfully but earnestly urge his nomination.

CATHOLIC BISHOPS IN AMERICA.

Herr Cahensly of Germany has addressed a second memorial to the Holy See relative to the appointment of Catholic bishops over the episcopacies in the United States. A first petition asking that in the appointment of such bishops a certain number be selected who were of the same race as immigrants here speaking other than the English tongue awakened the opposition of dignitaries of the church in this country. The second petition answers their protests and objections by a fuller recitation of the reasons why, in the opinion of Herr Cahensly, such a change in the selection of bishops would be beneficial to the church and for the good of the immigrants in question.

A table of statistics is appended to the memorial which shows that of 439,400 Catholics who left Europe for the American continent in the current year 178,900 came to the United States. Very few of these have any knowledge of the English language. By calculations based on statistics Herr Cahensly figures that "Catholic immigrants and their children ought to constitute in the United States a Catholic population of 26,000,000," while in fact the number of Catholics in the country "scarcely exceeds 10,000,000." For this net loss of 16,000,000 to the Catholic faith he offers the following causes:

1. The lack of sufficient protection for the emigrants at the time of their departure from home, during their voyage and on their arrival in America.
2. The insufficiency of priests and parishes of their own for the different nationalities of immigrants.
3. The pecuniary sacrifices, often exorbitant, that are exacted of the faithful.
4. The public schools.
5. The insufficiency of societies, Catholic and national associations of mutual aid, protection, etc., for the laboring classes.
6. The want of different representatives of the different nationalities of immigrants in the episcopate.

It is Herr Cahensly's contention that the immigrant, ignorant of the language, customs and geography of the country to which he has come, is the natural prey of the unscrupulous, and needs to be looked after by such societies as Saint-Raphael, the mission of which is the protection of immigrants, and for these societies he asks the protection of the Holy See. He holds further that from the beginning of their life in this country they need priests who can speak their tongue, in order that they may not fall out of the habit of receiving needed religious instructions. On this point he says:

No doubt that in the course of years the immigrants come to speak English; but to wait till they have learned that language before having them practice their religion, is to run the risk of finding them no longer disposed to live after a Christian fashion. The sad experience of the east proves unfortunately that such is almost always the case.

In order that they may have this instruction, that they may have benefit and other societies which are not non-Catholic in their tendencies, that they may have for their children parochial schools, Herr Cahensly believes it is of paramount important that there shall be appointed supervising pastors wielding such authority as the church bestows only upon its bishops, who are of the same nations as these peoples, speaking their tongue and understanding not only their history but their customs and prejudices. He believes that

If the Episcopate be handed over almost exclusively to one single nationality, to the detriment of the others, a feeling of uneasiness, of general discontent, is created among these last, a feeling which assumes the proportions of jealous national rivalries, feelings wounded and shocked in every sacred right and interest belonging to these same nations. The want of justice is as pressing as the want of bread. It is desired that concord and harmony should reign among the different nations that go to make up the church of the United States. Nothing is more desirable, nothing more essential. The sole and only way to attain this end is to give to every one of these nations bishops of their own, bishops belonging to each, who will represent their respective nations in the Episcopal body, just as those nations are represented among the parochial clergy and among the faithful.

Herr Cahensly has made a strong case. If it be admitted that he has found the real cause for the falling off from the church, the remedy he proposes would seem to be one it is in the interests of the church should be adopted. The assertion that he is making war on the Irish bishops is not supported by his statements. Devotion to his church and a warm interest in the humblest of her children appear to be his governing motives. The need he thinks he sees for change may not exist, but he sincerely thinks it does.

The Baron's Money.

The Ohio republicans undoubtedly nominated McKinley because they knew that was the way to get the biggest kind of a campaign fund. The robber barons will put it up, and the Ohio free-workers will have the handling of it. TRUTH HARD TO FIND.

The Haytian Atrocities Have Been Greatly Magnified.

Minister Price Asserts That Only 30 Were Killed.

The Story That President Hippolyte Had Exiled One Hundred People Is Denied.

NEW YORK, July 1.—"It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle' than it is to get at the exact truth regarding the condition of affairs in the little republic of Hayti.

If the advices received by the Clyde line steamer Ozama, which reached New York from Haytian ports yesterday, are to be believed, at least two hundred and eighty persons have been executed in Port au-Prince and one hundred others have been exiled from the republic and warned not to return under pain of death.

The Atlas line steamship Adirondack which arrived here last Sunday, also brought the report that a French man-of-war had gone to Port au Prince, and that an indemnity of $350,000 had been demanded from the Haytian government for the execution of M. Rigaud, the merchant, on May 28, as Rigaud was claimed to be a French citizen. Another report, alleged to have been made by a passenger on the Adirondack, was to the effect that Mme. Rigaud, the widow of the dead merchant, was about to bring suit against the Haytian government for the recovery of $300,000 indemnity for her husband's death.

The Adirondack left Port au Prince on June 3 on her down trip and did not touch there again on her return from Port Limon. It was at Jeremie, a southern port of Hayti, on June 5, that the officers of the steamer heard of the French man-of-war at the Haytian capital, and they could not verify this report.

The Ozama left Gonaives, Hayti, June 16, and St. Marc on the same day. It was at St. Marc that the report came that the total number of persons killed was 280. One of the passengers on the Adirondack is also authority for the statement that Gen. Legitime chartered a schooner and left Jamaica on June 22, with a number of his generals and some troops, for Turks island.

This was regarded in Jamaica as an indication that Legitime intended to make a descent on the north coast of Hayti. Another passenger on the same steamer said Legitime lived in a private house a short distance from his own, and the deposed president was at home when he left on June 23.

On the other hand, Mr. Hannibal Price, the Haytian minister, whom I saw at the legation in Pearl street, yesterday, declares that the total number killed in Port au Prince does not exceed 30, and he denies that President Hippolyte has issued any decree banishing any one from Hayti. He explains by saying that about 30 revolutionists, who were participants with Generals Guerrier and Badere in the attack on the arsenal on May 28, took refuge at the various foreign consulates in Port au Prince.

The minister, who declares that his information comes direct from the Haytian capital, also asserts that, with the exceptions of Guerrier and Badere, President Hippolyte promised all these refugees a full pardon if they would return quietly to their homes and remain there.

They refused to do this, the minister says, but requested instead that they be allowed to depart from Hayti. This request was granted. They were embarked by the various consuls under whose protection they were at the time. Where they all went to the minister will not say, but he thought the majority of them went to New Orleans.

As to the report that President Hippolyte tried to take four prisoners from the Mexican consulate at Port au Prince—in violation of the regulation which makes foreign consulates asylums of refuge—and that he subsequently attempted to play a bold bluff game with the members of the diplomatic corps when they called on him in a body to protest against the outrage. Minister Price makes this explanation:

"The report regarding the Haytian president's conduct, by the by, came to me through a letter written at Port au Prince and dated May 30. It was written by a gentleman who was present at the president's palace during the visit of the diplomatic corps and saw the original letter, an exact copy of which was published in the Herald."

The minister declares that there were only two shot instead of four, and these two were Generals Guerrier and Badere. The General Soult recently mentioned as one of the prisoners shot on the Champ de Mars was General Guerrier. The report that the two leaders escaped, the minister says, is false, as is also, he declares, the report that the Cauvin brothers were killed.

The refugees, he said, did not take refuge at the Mexican consulate, but went to the house of a woman some distance from the Mexican consulate. This woman's sister, now dead, Minister Price says, had been an acquaintance of the Mexican consul, and there was a Mexican flag in the house. The woman readily received the refugees, 30 in all, including the two ring-leaders in the revolt. At their request she brought the Mexican flag and placed it over her door, and it was this flag that met the eyes of the Haytian soldiers when they went to capture the escaped prisoners.

The officer in charge of the troops at once reported the presence of the flag to his superior officer, and the opinion of a judge in one of the city courts was sought as to whether the soldiers had a right to take the prisoners. He decided that they had, but the president, on being informed, telegraphed to President Diaz, so as to avoid any possible issue on the subject. That the president had attempted to snub the Diplomatic corps was of course emphatically denied.

That some innocent people had been shot down in Port au Prince the minister reluctantly admitted, but the victims, he thought, did not exceed half a dozen, and these were killed without President Hippolyte's knowledge.

As soon as the president heard of the acts of the soldiers he issued an order that if any one in authority should execute any prisoner arrested because of the revolt of May 28 the said person, soldier or officer, should at once be arrested and handed over to justice. This proclamation was dated June 2, and a copy of it published in Le Moniteur the next day was shown to me.

The other people shot besides the six victims, the minister said, were known to have been revolutionists.

M. Rigaud, the merchant shot on May 28, the minister said was known to have been an advisor of General Legitimest the time General Telemaque was killed in Port au Prince, and it was supposed that Rigaud had a hand in the attack on Telemaque's house. The soldiers of the north had been bitter against Rigaud from that time, and Rigaud was shot by the soldiers, the minister said, without President Hippolyte's knowledge, and Rigaud's nephew as well.

No French man-of-war had been at Port au Prince and no demand for indemnity had been made by the French government, the minister said, though he admitted that the claim that Rigaud was a subject had been made.

Rigaud's family have been Haytians for four generations, Mr. Price said. His greatgrandfather, Andre Rigaud, fought on the French side against L'Ouverture in the struggle for Haytian independence. When the Haytians triumphed Gen. Rigaud went to France but subsequently returned and commanded the department of the south, and he died a Haytian general. One of his sons, also a Haytian general, was M. Rigaud, the dead merchant's grandfather, and father, also a Haytian general, and secretary of state under Salnave's government. M. Rigaud's claim as a French citizen, the minister says, is based solely on some [illegible] him by Count de Seimaisons, which [illegible] at Port au Prince as a French [illegible] Rigaud was [illegible] showed me a copy of La Fraternite, the Haytian organ in Paris, in which appears a letter from M. E. Flesch, the present French minister in Hayti, who was asked to investigate the matter. M. Flesch sustains the views given above.

In conclusion Minister Price assured me that an era of extreme peace was settling over Hayti, though he admitted that there might be a few rebels and adherents of Legitime that Hippolyte had overlooked. The president was aware that there were any number of political factions in Hayti, but his policy had been to pursue a policy of his own and give no heed to political parties. As to Legitime's journey north the minister had heard nothing of any such movement.

LOCAL LABOR NEWS.

The Central Labor Union Makes Arrangements for Labor Day.—The Linemen Meet.—The Pavers' Troubles.

Last evening the linemen employed on the various electric roads, and the employes of Toledo Electric Railway company, met at Tinners' hall on Summit street for the purpose of perfecting the organization. The charter, however, had not arrived, and after the initiation of quite a number of the new members, the meeting was adjourned till next Friday evening, when permanent officers will be elected and duly installed.

The Central Labor union has appointed a committee to arrange for a demonstration and picnic on labor day. Inducements have been extended by the managers of Belle park on upper Broadway with a view of having the picnic held there, but the general sentiment seems to be in favor of Metropolitan park. This, however, will be left to the committee to decide. It is claimed by the Belle people that street car facilities are much better. This will probably not be true by labor day, as several street lines will then be in operation between the central part of the city and Metropolitan park. It is proposed to have a grand procession in the forenoon and picnic and general merry-making in the afternoon. Nothing will be left undone to make it a success.

The trouble among the barbers still continues. It does seem singular that the trivial difference which exists cannot be amicably settled. The barbers, both employers and employes, are unusually intelligent men, and it is peculiar that the matter of an hour or two, more or less, canot be settled without trouble, and that there will be trouble is apparent. Some of the barbers propose keeping open on July 4, if it is necessary that they run the shops themselves, and it is rumored that unless the employes give in numerous discharges will follow. It is to be hoped that it will not be found necessary to resort to such extreme measures.

The pavers, it appears, are not getting the better of the difficulty existing on the St. Clair street paving. It is understood that Contractor Streicher has sent to Cleveland for pavers, and should he be successful in obtaining them trouble is anticipated. It is probable that Monday evening a petition will be presented to the council with a view to compelling the contractor to employ home labor and home work.

The printers' strike with the Blade Printing & Paper Co. seems no nearer a settlement than three weeks ago. A number of non-unionists have taken the place of the strikers and the firm seems determined to stand out to the bitter end. The strikers, however, feel confident, and are in a position to keep up the battle for a year if necessary. One of them said this morning they had decided to "light it out on the lines laid down if it took several summers to gain a victory." It is to the interest of all parties concerned that a settlement should be reached, and the sooner it is done, not alone will it be better, but much more easier accomplished.

The Clerks' Mutual Protective union met last evening and talked "early closing" for some time. There was satisfaction expressed at the progress thus far made, and efforts will continue in the same line. It was decided to print cards with the following words: "This store will be closed, after July 6, at 6:30 p. m., except Saturday," and give them to such stores as will observe the rule.

POLICEMAN AND HIS CLUB

Involves the City in a $5,000 Damage Suit.

In the common pleas court, John Park filed proceedings against the city to recover $5,000 damages.

The plaintiff states that on May 23, 1891, while in Washington township, beyond the city limits, in pursuance of his lawful business, Timothy Morrisey, in the employ of the city as policeman, assaulted him without any warrant or right whatever, and beat and bruised him with a club, rendering him unconscious and greatly injuring his skull.

Will Be the Hero.

Governor Campbell will be the hero at Cleveland on the occasion of the democratic state convention. The contingent who are opposing him will find such an overwhelming sentiment in his favor that they can not but appreciate how silly was their effort to defeat him who, conscious of an administration of public affairs devoted to the interests of the people, dared to force the fighting, and refused to seek a compromise with those whose actions in the past have brought the party into disrepute. Campbell will be nominated and it will be to Larry Neal's interest to get on the wagon if he wants to ride.—Middletown Signal.

Desperate Struggle.

The plutocrats will make a life and death struggle in Ohio this year. They will spend oceans of money, if necessary, to elect McKinley. If they can succeed in making him governor they will be in absolute control of the republican organization and will dictate both platform and ticket next year. There never was on earth a more sharply defined conflict between "the masses and the classes" than that which is impending in Ohio.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

FAILED TO PAY THE TAX,

And as a Result Some Saloonists and Druggists

Will Have a Little Business With Uncle Sam—The New Fiscal Year Begins.

Notwithstanding the appeals that have been made through the newspapers of the city for over a month by Revenue Collector Waldorf, a great many retail saloon keepers and druggists have failed to pay their taxes as prescribed by law, and the result is that this morning several found themselves reported to the district attorney for prosecution.

Six or eight appeared this morning and paid their taxes, but in each case Mr. Waldorf reported the failure to pay to the United States government, and prosecution in every case of omission will follow. The office remained open last evening till 10 o'clock. The banks of the city wherein deposits are made by the revenue office, were obliging enough to take deposits as late as 10 o'clock last night. This is something unusual, and is the first time in the history of the office that such has been done.

Deputy Collector Clark spoke of the matter this morning to a BEE and said that the duty of the government officials in any case where taxpayers failed to respond to the notice and appeals was very plain. Every case would be reported to the district attorney, and undoubtedly prosecution would follow.

Receipts amounting to $23,827.16 were received yesterday, and the day before $15,343 were received. These are the two largest days since the office has been established. The total amount of collections for the month was $137,817.92, which is a considerable increase over the corresponding month of last year. The total for the fiscal year ending June 30 is $712,873, an increase of $53,646.62 over last year.

As has been repeatedly stated in the BEE, to-day commences the new date of the fiscal year when the McKinley act begins. All liquor dealers, druggists, etc., who have failed to pay their taxes will be prosecuted. No excuse can be taken, but where extenuating circumstances may exist, the matter is left to the discretion of the district attorney. Mr. Waldorf desires it to be distinctly understood that he does not propose to do anything annoying, but is simply performing his duty in reporting every case. The newspapers and the brewers have both been very kind in printing his appeals and in calling attention of the taxpayers to the new law. He says that there will be over fifty cases in this district to come to the attention of the United States court.

THEY ARE FIGHTING AGAIN.

Another Engagement Reported from Iqueque.

Both Land and Sea Forces Engaged in Battle Near Coquimbo and Huasca.

IQUEQUE, July 1, via Galveston.—It is rumored that heavy fighting has taken place between the government and congressional forces on the coast between the towns of Coquimbo and Huasca. Engagements are said to have occurred both on land and sea, but no particulars have yet been received.

One of Herrmann's Great Tricks.

People have repeatedly asked me which of my tricks have pleased me the most, and which I take the most delight in performing. Naturally the effort that brings the greatest success is regarded by a man his best. I consider the trick of restoring the shattered mirror as my most famous one. This I had the honor of performing before the czar of Russia upon an invitation to give an exhibition at his court. It was done unexpectedly to the spectators, and was not down on the regular bill. While playing billiards with the attaches of the court after the performance, the czar being present in the saloon, I shot a ball with all my strength against a plate-glass mirror extending from floor to ceiling. It was shivered into 50 pieces. Consternation was depicted on every countenance; no one more plainly than my own. While the czar courteously waived my apology, considering the destruction of the mirror as trifling, and ordered the game to proceed, I could easily see that my supposed awkwardness made a disagreeable impression. With the czar's permission I examined the mirror to estimate the damage done and the possibility of repairing it. While so engaged one of the suite playfully challenged me to exercise my art and make the mirror whole again, never dreaming that his challenge was the very cue I wanted, and not considering the successful acceptance of it as possible. I hesitated an instant, and then ordered the mirror to be covered with a cloth entirely concealing it from view. On the removal of the cloth, after 10 minutes, the mirror was found without a flaw, and as perfect as before the damage. I will leave it to my readers' imagination to decide how this trick was done.—North American Review.

Finish Fight.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 1.—The Australian heavy weights Billy Smith and Jack Slavin, brother of Frank Slavin, met at the Occidental club last night in a finish fight for a purse of $1,500. Slavin scored a knockdown and first blood in 14th round and another knockdown in the 16th but was sent to the floor himself in the 40th. After a rally the men were apparently on even terms at the end of the 42d with Smith doing the most leading. From the 43d to the 48th Smith continued to hammer Slavin, but the blows either from long delivery, or lack of force, failed to make much impression on the latter. Slavin continued cautiously to seek Smith's jaw with a straight lefthand counter, and near the end of the 47th sent Smith through the ropes to the floor, and the sound of the gong saved him from being counted out. Smith had not recovered from the effect of his fall when he came to the center of the ring in the 48th, and Slavin sent him down for the last time with a lefthander on the jaw.

Time for Blaine.

Will Start the Ball.

The democratic state convention at Cleveland on July 14 and 15 will name the ticket that will carry Ohio in November. That convention will be of the people, by the people and for the people, and not one of office holders and professional politicians. COMMON SENSE QUESTIONS.

TO THE EDITOR:—Will the farmers, mechanics and wage workers generally in the thinner ranks of the republican party relish the news characterizing the columns of the few papers now supporting the g. o. p. when on the same page is the announcement of magnificent crops of all kinds growing, grown and being harvested all over our country and the most sorrowful tales of financial distress and failures in all classes of business and strikes for higher wages all over our land—how do you reconcile this motley mess of news after 30 years of your administration, the lies of which demonstrate the fact that the "protected" manufacturers are getting richer daily and the farmers, mechanics and the laboring community getting poorer daily; can you explain this state of things?

How many cases of conversion can our republican newspapers give us now from day to day in the way of recruits from the democratic party over to the republican-"protective"-McKinley-bill, Reed-Harrison, Wannamaker-Bardsley, "Keystone bank" gang.

Again we ask can any of the astute followers of the McKinley protective falacy give us the base upon which they hope or expect to elect Bill McKinley governor of Ohio this fall, how can you count on such a result, did the last fall elections encourage you to count on any increase of your chickens coming from such a lot of addled eggs?

How do you explain the unsettled condition of all kinds of business throughout our whole country, and about three hundred failures each week? What's the cause of all this commotion, and where does your "protection" principle come in? Who is "protected," and how are they "protected?" Do you mean to infer that the "poorhouse over the hill" will finally protect the poor deluded creatures who are led blindly by the villianous cry of "protection"—on and on to the poorhouse or to the tramp's paradise?

Who but the g. o. p. were inventors and manufacturers of tramps in this our once happy, independent land?

Who but the g. o. p. has been the means of a great increase in our prison house accomodation and the enlargement of our insane asylums, in fact making in some cases, the asylum buildings the best portion of our cities as instanced in this neck of land.

And still our manufacturers of woolen cloths into garments and our "plush" cloak manufacturers continue to refuse to give us a schedule of their prices paid the people plying the needle for them under the piratical principle called "protection." Come out, Mr. Manufacturer, if you are really honest and not lying under the old deceptive fat-frying deception. In this obstinate refusal you do not encourage a feeling of confidence in your acts.

Now will our woolen and plush manufacturers of various garments give a comparative schedule of prices paid their employes in accurate figures, before and since the passage of the McKinley-Reed-Harrison outrage, commonly called the McKinley bill?

What have you McKinley-Foraker followers to say against Gov. James E. Campbell? Are you complaining of his attempt to reform the Cincinnati gang? Who ever heard of a republican governor, especially "ripper-ripped Joe Foraker," attempting to correct a bad appointment, but in lieu thereof we notice several coats of whitewash.

When Governor Campbell called his "extra session" to purify "Foraker's old Cincinnati nest, why did some of your more honestly inclined republicans say that if the republican party would adopt a little of that kind of work in their ranks it would be an improvement at least?

Who is responsible for the existence among us of the "Anarchists" and the awful influx of the vilest spewings of the "protection" portions of Europe? How many of this Anarchist population has come over from old free trade England, eh? And why is it a fact in every case that all of the objectionable importations come from protection portions of foreign countries? How is this, Mister Protectionist?

Why are our "protection" newspapers publishing statements of large numbers of Welsh workmen being imported to run your imaginary-electioneering-McKinley-tin-plate-myth manufactories? How is this going to materially assist our American laborers? Now don't be so very enthusiastic in the relation of your Munchausen mythical manufacturing political machines. You are very liable to overreach your intended "protection" point. Go a little slow, gents, in your foolish "protection" prattle.

While you enthusiastic professed reformers are shooting your missiles so very readily at any real or apparent wrong committed by democrats, just pause a moment and "e-o-k" up a little dish, composed of Bardsley, Wanamaker and Keystone wickedness, and tell us why the good Methodist, brother Wanamaker, failed to materialize when summoned to come before the sanhedrim, composed of instigators, to enquire into the inwardness of our P. M. General? Spend a little of your strength gentlemen in cleaning your own door yards, and it will be as well certainly, and look much better.

Can you mention one month, one single month for the past 18 years, in which you did not see an account of some strike for higher wages, among your "protected" American laborers right here in this country, that produced one white cravated little grand-pa's-grand-son and Bill McKinley?

Will some of the hardy yeomanry of the g. o. p. give us a statement of the condition of the chestnut tree planted in Philadelphia in September, 1889, by our little McKinley, pen-pushing, white-cravated president and our very good Wanamaker. Many are anxious to know if the Bardsley Keystone bank business hasn't blasted the distinguished political plant

OHIO'S SUPREME COURT.

Decision Rendered in the Celebrated DeVere Case.

The Toledo Colony at the Pen Will Not Lose the Presence of the Gay Deceiver.

COLUMBUS, July 1.—The supreme court has adjourned until September 29, after handing down a number of decisions. Since the opening of the term in January, when there were 971 cases on the docket, 219 cases have been filed, making a total of 1,190, while 230 have been disposed of, leaving 960 for consideration, being a gain on the docket of eleven cases. In addition 187 motions have been passed upon.

The motion docket this year has been larger than usual, but the court bids fair to equal if not surpass the record of last year, which exceeded that of any former year in the history of the court.

There are still three working months in the year and should the same record be maintained, the court will dispose of 745 general docket and 281 motions before the end of the term in December. In 1890 cases disposed of on the general docket were 377, on motion docket 237.

Among the decisions rendered was one denying the motion of Hugh Nevin of Brown county, sentenced to four years' imprisonment for shooting to kill, after four trials.

Another motion of a similar character overruled was that of Lydia DeVere, the Toledo fortune teller and clairvoyant, who was sent to prison for two years for fraudulent transactions, and both parties will be compelled to serve their time.

A TOLEDO LADY

Will Run the Mail Wagons for Another Year.

Contract Awarded This Morning—Mrs. Decker Secures the Sub-Contract—New Wagons.

The contract for operating the mail messenger service at Toledo, known as route 31,103, has been awarded by the government to Messrs. Mason & Culp, of Athens, Michigan, the contract going into effect this morning.

The company has sub-contracted to Mrs. Decker, of this city, and eight handsome new wagons were placed on the routes between the post-office and depot to-day.

The company furnishes the wagons, and Mrs. Decker the horses and men.

Last year the contract was handled by H. G. Seavin, of St. Joe, Mo., under which Mrs. Decker also was sub-contractor. She so satisfactorily performed the work that the new contractors readily entered into a similar agreement with her for the ensuing year.

The necessary bonds have been filled out and ratified by the authorities at Washington.

AT ELIZABETH'S COURT.

Simpson Circle Closes the Year With a Pleasant Entertainment.

Monday evening Queen Elizabeth, in all the pomp of the sixteenth century, held court at the residence of Mr. E. W. Tolerton. Simpson circle, a historical society, though in a stricter sense, a C. L. S. C. organization, finished its English history year, with even gayer annual festivities than usual.

The residence of Mr. Tolerton was ablaze with beauty, and the delicate art on the walls of the new home vied with the natural witcheries that everywhere surprised the guests. The archbishop of Canterbury, in canonical robes, Mary Stuart, in black velvet and pearls, the earl of Leicester, in some indiscribable archaic livery, might have been seen wandering among the fields of ferns and carnations.

As the first strains of music stole to the room above, Queen Elizabeth in a sumptuous mingling of green and diamonds, preceded by flower girls strewing roses, and followed by little train-bearers who, at every step, suppressed a good-natured American chuckle at their royal elevation, descended the staircase. The queen ascended the throne arranged in the parlor, and all the lords and peeresses stood in deferential attitude around her. Miss Nellie Goodwin and Miss Addie Dowland, maids of honor, favored the queen with some delightful music, and then celebrities and beauties were presented to her in the customary conventional manner. Ben Johnson, Catherine de Medici, the Countess of Salisbury, Lady Arabella Stuart, a Puritan minister, the Duchess of Marlborough, Shakespeare, and Lady Jane Grey, among others, were presented to the queen.

This ceremony was followed by an exceedingly novel drama in five acts, representing different periods in English history. The first was a scene from Tennyson's "Idyls of the King." It was the pretty picture in which King Arthur, in search of Queen Guenivere, finds her in her convent retreat, and where the queen is serenaded by the little singing maid. Then came the "Canterbury Tales," full of mirth and originality; a thrilling scene from Richard III.; the "War of Roses," a burlesque on the long struggle of the houses of York and Lancaster; and lastly the queen was given a dip into the future through delegates of the circle at the good queen's court.

Miss Hattie Frankeberger, who has been the circle's faithful secretary for the past four years, in recognition of her services, was presented with a beautiful diamond ring.

The souvenirs, designed by Mrs. Frank Jaquet, were extremely artistic, and were in the shape of a rose of five pink petals, each petal engraved in gilt with some part of the evening's program.

At the close of the five acts, Queen Bess, in regal style, knighted the able and constant leader of the circle, Mr. E. W. Tolerton, dubbing him with the English "Sir" Tolerton for the rest of his American days.

Dainty refreshments were served at the end of the literary and courtly exercises in Mrs. Tolerton's magnificent antique dining room, after which the members of the circle adjourned to their homes to doff their titles for less regal, though equally noble, American ones.

He Wanted to Shoot.

PRESCOTT, July 1.—Ex-Justice James H. Wright, of the state supreme court, made an attempt to shoot Adjutant-General Gill, of Phoenix, on Saturday night last. Bloodshed was prevented only by the interference of the bystanders.

Some trouble over an alleged libel is said to be the cause. Wright was taken to jail and subsequently arraigned and fined for carrying concealed weapons.

Baby's Fearful Suffering from Skin Disease Covering Entire Body Cured by Cuticura.

My baby was taken very sick when he was three months old, and in a few days began breaking out. We employed both of the home doctors, and they could do nothing for him. Then we went for the best doctor in Eaton Rapids, Mich., and he doctored him for two weeks, and he got worse all the time; and then I took him to Jackson, to a doctor who attends especially to skin diseases and then he got worse than ever. Then I told my husband we had better try the CUTICURA REMEDIES any way; did not have any idea they would do any good, but in less than two months from the time we began giving them to him he was entirely well and not a spot on him. His hair began growing right off, and we thought he would always be bald-headed. There was not a spot on his whole body, face and head, only his nose and eyes but what was as raw as beefsteak. So poor there was not anything but bone, and so weak he could raise neither hand nor head.

SCRAPING THE PAN.

We have often been told of the unalloyed bliss,
Shared alike by the simple and wise,
That has come to each one in his bright childhood days—
The making of tempting mud pies.
But it seems to me strange that the sweetest and best
In our young lives should yet be forgot—
The frolic, the fun and exquisite joy
In scraping the pan for the pot.
In the long shadowed life "what is left" is but dregs
More bitter as older we grow;
Then we think, with a sigh, of the cake in the pan
That we scraped in the sweet long ago.
Could I, from the ears full of hours gone by,
Choose one to live over again,
I would take that clear hour from my childhood's best days,
On mother's old kitchen floor, when,
After waiting so long, with a hungering taste,
At last, with a goodness benign,
The old ebony cook put the cake in to bake,
And the pan, all unscraped, then was mine.

A dentist of Moscow is reported to have discovered a method of supplying the human mouth with false teeth which will grow into the gums as firmly as natural ones. Blacksmith Ripper, of Iglau, Moravia, had attempted suicide several times and been interferred with; so he constructed a box like a clock case, seven feet high, the door of which could be fastened with padlocks inside. A series of experiments has lately been made with regard to the familiar fact that frost only dry ground temperatures are more easily borne than moist, but dry cold causes much less discomfort than moist cold. Dogs, fasting or fed, being observed in an air clarometer, it appeared that in all cases moist air increased the loss of heat by conduction and radication.

A comprehensive study of the influence of forests on the daily variation of the temperature in Germany and Austria shows that the absolute value of the influence of woods of a given kind of trees is affected by the degree of density of the wood, being higher the denser the wood. The fact of whether the climate is oceanic or continental also affected the result.

An aluminum boat, propelled by electricity from an aluminum battery, is being constructed by the inventor, Mr. D. J. Cable, of Pittsburg, Pa. The battery, Mr. Cable says, will weigh but about a couple of pounds, and will be sufficient to produce the power necessary for running a pleasure boat of good size. A boat of this metal, capable of carrying four to six persons, can be made of a weight not exceeding sixty or seventy pounds, and would be very easily handled. Mr. Cable states that he has found means of overcoming the great difficulty aluminum presents to soldering.

The electric plant of the San Miguel Consolidated Gold Mining company is being installed at Telluride, Col. To utilize the water power in the vicinity for the purpose of running the stamp mills of the company's mines a dam was built across the San Miguel river, above Telluride, which falls at that place 400 feet in less than a mile. From the head gate the water is taken through a 4,000-foot pipe, gradually decreasing in diameter from 20 inches to 12 inches, to the power station, where it is delivered to two six-feet Pelton wheels. The loss in transmission between generator and motor over a two-and-one-half-mile circuit is said to be barely 5 per cent.

To the great regret of the friends of the late Dr. Schliemann, many of the interesting relics dug up by the great explorer in Troy have been stolen and despoiled by the miserable inhabitants of Asia Minor. Turks and Arabians in the neighborhood of the excavations use the valuable stones to build their huts. After Schliemann's death a man was employed to guard the ruins. His salary was discontinued recently, however, and the watchman ceased to guard the excavations. The Stomboul, of Constantinople, appeals to the artistic societies of Europe and America to "put an end to the inconociasm and vandalism of the semi-barbarous inhabitants," and to continue the work of the great Schliemann.

Wichita, Kan., hasn't as big a boom on now as it had two or three years ago, though it is still a bustling town of 30,000 inhabitants. Among its interesting features are its institutions of learning, which haven't much past or present, but a great future. There is Fairmount college, which the Congregationalists put up at a cost of $100,000. It hasn't any students yet. Wichita university was built by the Lutherans at a cost of $100,000, and is in operation. The Presbyterians have a fine site for a college, but prudently refrain from building just yet. Garfield university is to be one of the big things of the west when finished. It will cover an acre and a half of land and will accommodate 3,500 students. At present it accommodates a much smaller number, however.

While a company of Russian grenadiers of the guard were digging a ditch as a portion of their drill, in a heavy shower of rain, a stroke of lightning felled half of them to the ground. The lightning also struck all the band, and others who were near the captain's horse, killing the latter on the spot. One member of the band had the crest of his helmet melted, the back of his skull laid open, his clothes and body on the right side singed, and one of his boots torn from his foot and hurled several yards away. A drummer, in addition to severe internal injuries, was driven under the horse, which fell upon him and nearly crushed him to death. The trumpeter who was holding the animal was severely injured in the leg. The captain was struck to the ground and lay there unconscious for a long time, and close by were two non-commissioned officers, who also remained for some time insensible.

AN OLD T. C. TIGER.

Last Night's Reception at Memorial Hall.

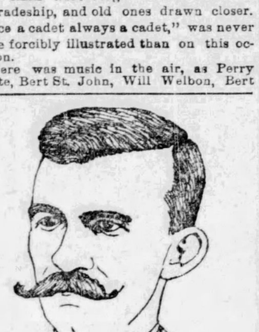
The Toledo Cadets Invite Former Associates to a Feast of Good Things—A. E. O. T.

The Toledo Cadets' reception and banquet at Memorial hall last evening was a success first and last. The boys are entertainers in every sense of the word, as will be vouched for by their guests of last evening.

The affair was given in honor of the honorary and contributing members and veteran corps.

The veterans turned out in great shape, as of old, though many of them have long since departed for other fields of usefulness. Business cares were put aside, trouble forgot, and everybody devoted themselves to the pleasures of the hour, unstinted, informal. New links were forged in the chain of comradeship, and old ones drawn closer. "Once a cadet always a cadet," was never more forcibly illustrated than on this occasion.

There was music in the air, as Perry Waite, Bert St. John, Will Welbon, Bert



CAPT. M'MAKEN.

Bergert, Frank H. Tanner, Will Stackhouse, Ode Law, Geo. Leibius and others of like mind were there, all in a lively mood, keyed just about right for a good time, and the guests enjoyed a rare treat. Will Stackhouse took a seat at the piano early in the evening and retained it faithfully until ordered to partake of the rations. For two hours the musical ball was kept rolling. Songs, dances, humorous sketches —in fact the boys let themselves out, and no further comment is necessary.

At 10 o'clock the command was given to "fall in." The "vets" formed one side of the hall and the cadets on the other. They were then marshaled together and marched to supper. The tables, three in number, were arranged in splendid taste, potted plants, ferns and cut flowers adding freshness to the attractive surroundings.

The benediction was dispensed with, Chaplain Bacon not being able to remain.

Capt. McMaken welcomed the guests in the name of the Cadets. His remarks at times were very touching. He brought many incidents to mind that had been forgotten, and made all to feel that the invitation to be present was not formal by any means. At the conclusion of the captain's remarks, Mr. Frank H. Tanner, one of the veterans, proposed three cheers for "Mc," and they were given with a T. C. tiger.

Mayor Emmick was listed for a toast, "The City of Toledo," but was not present and Capt. McMaken called upon Charley ("Snarkey") Durian for a little talk, that he was a city official and could conveniently fill the mayor's shoes. Charley replied that he couldn't fill the bill and wouldn't make the attempt, but he made a neat talk just the same.

John A. Waite responded to the toast "The Toledo cadets of 1856 and 1821. They furnished an example of patriotism, when their country called them, which we should follow if ever needed." He gave an interesting bit of history of the cadets and the first organization, which was formed in 1856 by Gen. C. W. Hill. His object was to instill military discipline and training in the public schools. This was done, and the boys graded in military tactics as in other branches. When the war broke out 50 responded, of which number 14 were left on the field. His talk was instructive and greatly appreciated.

The next toast was, "Our contributing members. They have furnished the sinews of financial success and encouraged us by words and deeds in all times past," which was responded to by James H. Southard, one of the most popular of the contributing members. His talk was bright, to the point and full of good things. "Jim" is right in line with the boys, and they sang, "He Is a Jolly Good Fellow" when he concluded, which was quite appropriate.

William Beatty of the Bee, responded to "The Press—one of our staunchest friends in adversity and a happy sharer in our successes."

"The Honorary Life Members, to Whom, Though Few, Living or Dead, all Honor is Due," was next announced by Toastmaster McMaken. Major O. J. Hopkins replied, which included a review of the accomplishments of the organization since the time when the "Vets" were in line to the present time.

Col. Bunker responded to "The New Armory—What is it Like. May Our Life in it be as Peaceful as in the Old." The colonel is thoroughly posted on the subject, as he takes great pride in the Toledo military organizations, and has a warm spot for the cadets. He compared the old cramped quarters to those of the new armory, which will be made ready for occupancy. The boys were all attention.

The next was a "silent toast"—"Our dead comrades: may our Father who is in heaven have you in His holy keeping." All present stood with bowed heads, each paying a silent tribute to comrades who have answered to the final roll call.

Surgeon Parmalee then responded to "Come and get your quinine." He related a funny story, and with his crisp remarks kept the party in an uproar all the time.

The concluding toast of the evening, "The Toledo cadet veteran corps—where fond recollections recall them to view. Once a cadet always a cadet," was responded to by Lieutenant Billy Worts, commander of the corps. The idea of forming a veteran corps was discussed, and most thoroughly presented by Mr. Worts, who has been the prime factor in this movement, and he talked intelligently on the subject. In closing he said: "We also desire to strengthen the feeling of good fellowship that exists between ourselves and the present members of the Toledo cadets. Our hearts are always with the company, and we stand ready to help them with any advice they may ask, and in a more substantial way if needed. We are ready at all times to fall in at the word of command. I hope that this will be the eve of a closer relationship between us, and that in the near future we will be identical."

This toast concluded the regular program and then an hour was occupied with talks by various gentlemen as they were called upon, including Major E. O. Brown, Clarence E. Armstrong, Frank P. Weed, Parks Hone, S. W. Boles, Griff Gassoway, Col. Pluck, Adolph Tanner, E. J. Tippett, Bert Bergert, Lieut. Tom Watters, Lieut. "Kitty" Howells, and others too numerous to mention.

It was 1 o'clock when "Auld Lang Syne" was sung, and one of the most enjoyable evenings ever spent by the company was brought to a close. All promised to respond to invitations for a like affair if they got the chance, and that too quick.

A QUIETUS ON MR. QUAY.

Men of His Own Political Party Denounce Him.

PHILADELPHIA, July 1.—An address "To the Citizens of Pennsylvania," signed by Rudolph Cunkelburg, John T. Bailey & Co., George Wharton Pepper, George Burnham, Charles Haber Clark, Rev. Stephen W. Dana, Rev. W. N. McVickar, John H. Converse, Rev. Charles Wood, Rev. S. D. McConnell and 136 others is made public.

The signers speak "as Pennsylvanians and as men," and their action is a protest against Senator Quay being longer a controlling factor in the affairs of the state. The statement is made that the political methods in the state are now corrupt, in sharp contrast to the disposition of the rank and file of the party. The leadership is affirmed to be completely within Senator Quay, "absolute in its control, pernicious in its methods and disastrous in its results."

The public record of Senator Quay is then touched. The paper says: "Mr. Quay is mainly responsible for the overwhelming disaster which befell the republican party in this state during the past autumn.

"It is taking to the lake and we are lost," said the young lady.

"Never mind," was the prompt reply, "I built the city pipe line under more disadvantages than this, and I can land a fish, even if it does weigh a ton."

Opposite Warner's the fish made a rush for the open sea, and Kerlin recovered his senses long enough to draw a hugh bowie knife and sever the string.

He avers that the fish was all of fifty feet in length, and he would not undertake to guess what might be his weight. He says that the two eyes were as large as saucers, and that one fin was a foot and a half long.

As has been stated the truth of this story is vouched for, not only by Mr. Kerlin, who is not a professional fisherman, but by a young lady who never caught but one black bass in her life.

Mr. Cauldwell, the undertaker, and Charlie Murphy, of the Free Employment office, had a peculiar experience on the creek a week ago. Mr. Cauldwell has a handsome shanty near Point Place, and during the summer months spends a good deal of the time there with his family.

It was just after supper and the pair started for a trip over to Ed McCleary's farm after watermelons and berries. After leaving the channel and entering the swamp they became aware of a great commotion in front of them. Here and there throughout the swamp there are spots of clear water wherein the sunfish spawn at this season of the year. It was in one of these clear spots that the commotion was visible. A closer approach discovered what appeared to be two animals fighting. Stopping at the edge of the open space and reconoitering, they discovered it to be two fishes, a huge pike weighing all of 25 or 30 pounds, and the bass not less than eight or ten. The bass is a very timid fish, and will not fight unless forced into a corner. The pike, on the other hand, is unusually fierce, and will fight anything or everything that comes in its way.

The pike had obtained such a hold that the gentlemen thought they could secure them both without much trouble. As they entered the point the combatants suddenly ceased, and the bass made a frantic rush for the boat. Three different times he jumped out of the water, and the fourth jump landed plump in the boat. The two men were so paralyzed that they were unable to realize the situation for several moments. Cauldwell, however, grasped an oar and dealt the fish several heavy blows on the head, and they returned with it in triumph to the shanty, where they exhibited it to a number of fishermen. John Gunckel, Judge Lorenz, Billy Warner, Billy Lanz and several others will make affidavit as to the truth of this story.

Peyishness.

If trifles put grown people out and make them peevish and irritable what must be the effect on children of such pain as Colic, Flatulency, etc. The remedy, however, is simple and sure. Rev. C. B. Personius, writing from Decatur, N. Y., says: "We have used a bottle of Dr. Hand's Colic Cure, procured at Wilkes-Barre while attending conference, and do not know how to get along without it. Will you send me two or three bottles? We can recommend it as a great success. Please send bill for same." When a remedy justifies such indorsement as this, surely its intrinsic worth is a positive fact.

SOME FISH STORIES

That are Vouched for on Best of Authority.

Of Course They Will Be Believed Because of Their Reasonableness—Who Can Beat Them?

A somewhat remarkable fish story comes this week from Ten Mile creek. It is vouched for by Maj. Leflet, and inasmuch as his veracity as a fisherman has never been disputed, it must be accepted as truth.

The major is building himself a handsome cottage near Lang's bend. Last winter while constructing the dock which runs out into the creek he found it necessary to secure a number of large logs. From the rafts which arrive daily during the summer in the bay are disconnected quite a number of logs which during the winter are found imbedded in the ice. Procuring a large pike pole, the major started in search of a log one day last February. The ice had commenced to thaw and was broken up towards the outer edges. He found several desirable logs, but they were wedged so fast in the ice that he was unable to remove them.

Stepping at last upon what he thought was a log, it suddenly yielded beneath his feet and disappeared under the ice. He went down with it, but was up again in a moment. His first impression was that it was a rotten log which had given way beneath his weight, but watching the large hole where it disappeared, he saw huge bubbles arise. In a moment a huge head with large bulging eyes was thrust through the aperture in the ice. It continued to rise from out the hole till it was at least eight feet above the water. It was in shape and size like a huge pike, and the major's first impulse was to strike it with the pole, which he promptly did. The fish, or animal, whichever it was, emitted a grunt like a pig, and disappeared in the hole in the ice, and though he watched for it some time, it did not re-appear.

On his way home, he considered the feasibility of writing up his strange experience in the Bee, but relating it to his wife came to the conclusion that it was so improbable that it would not be believed, so till the present he has said nothing about it. Three or four days ago, however, while fishing below Point Place at the state line, one of his lines received a sudden jerk, and inasmuch as it was a very large minnow he knew that nothing but an extraordinary large fish would bite at it. He stooped cautiously and lifted the line which was attached to the boat, but in a moment it was jerked from his hand, and the boat turning suddenly around, began to move up stream as if imbued with life.

The boat had been anchored by a string tied to a stone, but even this obstacle did not seem to impede its progress to any extent. He caught the line, which was of stout whip cord, and pulling upon it with all his might, brought to the surface what looked to him at first like a log. Suddenly a huge head was thrust from the water, and the grunting sound which reminded him of his experience in the creek last winter was again heard. The boat went up stream past Point Place, near Billy Warner's, and finding that he was in danger of losing not only the boat but himself, he procured a knife and cut the string.

He told his experience to Billy Warner, Lanz and several others, and quite a number are prepared to make affidavit to the fact that they saw the boat going up stream with the major standing upright in it, and no visible mode of power. Those who do not believe this story can find the proof of it in the track in the ice where the major discovered the monster last winter.

The above story is corroborated by Richard Kerlin, who has had the contract for building the city natural gas line. Mr. Kerlin, it seems, was fishing on the creek a few days ago and had a somewhat similar experience as the major. His story is vouched for by a young lady who was a witness of the transaction.

It was very warm and he lay back in the boat carelessly throwing his bait against the stream, and now and then lifting it from the water to see that it had not been stolen. Suddenly he felt a heavy jerk, and jumping to his feet saw distinctly within three or four feet of the boat a long dark object wriggling in the water. It had hold of his hook and was seemingly undecided whether to accept the prize he had gotten in, or to disgorge it. There was no breed and nothing whatever to stage the change in the position of the boat, as both occupants were sitting perfectly quiet. Suddenly, however, the boat veered around and began to move up stream.

Realizing that he had on his line an enormous fish, he decided if possible to capture him. He is not the expert the major is, but he has any amount of grit, and it is a cold day when he cannot land a fish when he has once hooked it. He pulled frantically on the line for a moment and succeeded in changing the course of the fish, for such it appeared to be. We may remark here that fishes inevitably swim against stream, but finding his course impeded so much by the string pull the fish suddenly turned with such force down stream that it almost upset the boat. He had not the presence of mind to cut the line as did Major Leflet, but held on to it with the greatest energy. The boat moved slowly but steadily upward, towards Maumee, and at every moment its career was becoming more impetuous.

BE CAREFUL.

Be careful of your associations! Bad company is not better than none at all.

Be careful what you say! You can recall some things but never spoken words.

Be careful in your habits and in your dress! Neatness and good manners should be necessities.

Be careful of your diet! Proper food and drink have much to do with happiness.

Be careful of your health! Money cannot buy it—then why should you squander it?

Be specially careful at this season of the year! The air is full of poisons. Malaria is abroad. You need to exercise great care.

Be careful how you exercise this care! Remember that pure whiskey taken in water is the best way to counteract malaria poison and all diseases incident to this season.

Be careful what whiskey you use! Bear in mind that Duffy's Pure Malt has the highest standing and is the only medicinal whiskey in the market.

Be careful that no druggist deceives you into taking some cheap whiskey which may be claimed as just as good! There is no medicinal whiskey which is so good.

JULY: THE YEAR'S SWEETHEART.

All things beautiful love her:
The butterflies light and fleet,
The branches that bend above her,
The mosses that kiss her feet;
The ripening grain in the meadow,
The birds, singing sweet and near,
The opened flowers in the shadow,
The brook, with its ripple clear;
The bee in his clover sleeping,
The locusts, that drone and whir,
The rain from the hills, down sweeping,
And the clouds—are in love with her!
For she, oh, the shy new-comer,
So dear to the world, so dear!
Is heart of the heart of summer,
And sweetheart of all the year.

HER WEDDING TRIP.

It does not need a railroad and the electric light to bring happiness to a village community. The Blue Fork's population of something more than 200 souls, and sheltered in a very few dozen framehouses, possessed neither convenience as yet, and were, in fact, in touch with no Nebraska settlement larger than their own. But the much-talked-of peace and prosperity was plentiful there, and happiness in superfluity.

Perhaps the two happiest people in it, one October afternoon, were Joe Dwyer and Kate, the daughter of the blaksmith, old Lisha Moore. They were married up in the green picnic ground, as the pretty spot behind the little schoolhouse had come to be called; and the bride and groom received the congratulations of all the village, standing together on the daisy-covered slope, a tree waving over their heads, and the blue sky above and behind them. It had been a fancy of the bride, that out-door wedding; and her father's house was small. And after the congratulating and kissing—the children started this—there was a general taking hold of hands by everybody and dancing round the young pair, she blushing and laughing, and Dwyer with her, while a lusty chorus rang out, "Now you're married you must obey—you must be true to all you say," and so on, which meant the official ceremony to the youngsters much more than the squire's part.

It was dusk when they drove down the road in Dwyer's buggy amid cheers and farewells. Dwyer lived 13 miles northward at Borden's Pond. His house was there. He had only come to the Pond lately, and was, in fact, a stranger still in the region. During his looking round process, before buying his farm the house of the Blue Fork blacksmith had been his headquarters; and being a energetic fellow he had decided on, and conducted, two transactions at the same time—courting and locating—so that to-day, within a month from his advent, he was "housed and wived." To be sure, little was known of him, but that little was good. Every man spoke well of him except one. That one was Fletcher of the Five Buttes mines, 20 miles away, his unsuccessful, sneering rival with Kate Moore—if a man twice refused by a woman, who then marries another man that suddenly comes into her life, out of hand, can be called a rival.

"We're going to be very happy, Joe," she said softly, as their wheels left the last of the village behind them.

"I mean that you shall be," he answered equally quietly. Their eyes met. They were not sentimentalists, tenderly as their hearts beat for each other. They understood one another without sentimentality. It was not a little her reserve that had endeared her to him, a part of her mental balance and good sense. She read all the unexpressed things in his nature with very clear eyes. They smiled, and then he kissed her, without dropping the reins of his new mare; and so they spun over the road, sometimes but a grassy lane.

It grew dark as they came to the Pines. The road to Bordon's pond ran straight through the tract, six miles, with the sombre trees closing about the very wheels of the buggy. The dark gray trunks shut them in. The moon rose. It was a night for a poet's marriage—if poets deserve fairer ones than those to whom life is chiefly prose. How still it was in the woods, save for their talk, the hoot-beats and Kate's clear laugh! Now and then they brushed the branches, or a dark bird fluttered up and flew across the bright sky with a call. In spite of themselves they grew even more still and more reflective.

Suddenly she spoke. "Do you believe Fletcher will try to do anything?"

"Anything? What do you mean?"

"Why, make trouble for—for me. You know he swore he would."

"Nonsense. Let him swear! What can he do?"

"I don't know. But you heard Jim Hawes—what he told Jim?"

"He can tell Jim Hawes what he likes. And what influence has Fletcher any way, except among his own sort over at the Buttes Mines?"

"He has a good deal there, they say."

"Yes, but what of that? You and I aren't going to live there, you know."

"It's a rough place, isn't it?"

"A rough place and a rougher crowd. There's little law and less order. It's generally so when a mine starts up. Fletcher has got some hold, too, over a dozen of the fellows. I don't know what it is, except that he has money to lend, and I pity his borrowers. He's a bad lot."

"Don't! You make me afraid of him," she said, touching his sleeve with her hand.

Then Dwyer laughed and chirrupped to his horse and kissed his wife again. "You needn't be afraid," he said. They drove out into a clearing; the pines had burnt, and grass and stumps came out silver and ebony in the moonlight. "Faster, Chromo," said Dwyer to the mare, which walked now. But as he spoke she shied. Something dark started up from the ground.

"Ha! Hallos there!" cried Dwyer, pulling in the mare.

"Stand, or I shoot!" a man cried back, hanging to the bridle. Kate screamed. She saw in the moonlight the flash of their revolvers. In a twinkling she and Dwyer were motionless, angry commands bursting forth on each side of them, hands outstretched, and a squad of dark figures where only stumps had been an instant earlier. Three or four were mounted.

"Get down out of that buggy," came the voice of one of them from under his rude maske.

"What do you want? Take your hands off that mare!" answered Dwyer, hoiding up his whip. He had no pistol with him. There had been no thought of needing that sort of thing in bringing his bride home through the tranquil pines.

"Get down out of that buggy, I say, and you'll find out! If you don't—"

There was a general outbreak of angry voices seconding this order.

"Do you want me to leave my wife up here? Shame on you, whoever you are!" retorted Dwyer. He thought still it might be some rough joke, instead of the frontier "shiveree"—by Pond friends in disguise.

"Get down as they tell you," said Kate, in a low tone. She was quivering in every limb, but determined not to faint, nor "make a fool of herself." She thought it might possibly be play, too.

Dwyer alighted. "Well, here I am!" he said, facing the three foremost figures, whose pistols covered him. A fourth held the mare. The rest were to the right and left. "I haven't but a dollar on me," he went on; "you can look."

"We're not on the road, thank you," spoke the ringleader of the circle. Then there was a quick step forward and behind—a struggle and outcry, the latter Kate's from the buggy, though no one yet molested her. Dwyer's arms were clutched by some of those on foot, and he was held a prisoner. "Keep cool Kate," he managed to call out. He could not hear her say, "I'll—try!" But she said it. If it had not been for that suggestion of the familiar in one disguised voice, she would yet have believed it a brutal joke. But Fletcher—and a joke! That was unlikely, if Fletcher was here. There were men on all sides of her, some looking up at her in the moonlight.

"Will you—tell me—what you want of me?" Dwyer managed to demand again. "You take a coward's time—a man's wedding trip home—for either your foolishness—or worse!"

"In a moment," came the answer. "Is it Jackson's nag?" the same speaker called to two or three of the group busy about Chromo.

"It's Jackson's nag," was their quick answer.

They had turned a lantern on the mare, and were scrutinizing her from forelock to forefoot, one of their number washing her here and there with a sponge that had been dipped in some liquid.

"You lie!" called Dwyer indignantly. "For what do you take me?"

"For the fellow who stole Jackson's mare, Daylight, over at the Mines, a month ago, and who has kept her in hiding ever since. Paint's cheap, my friend. You're treed at last."

"I a horse thief?" Look at me! Are you out of your senses, all of you, no matter who you are? I'm Joe Dwyer, of Borden's Pond. Not a man I've met since I came there to live but will prove it to you, and give me a good word."

"Oh, don't try that game on us!" was the reply from the man evidently the main head in the expedition and blunder. "We're up to all that! And don't get behind the name of another man to try to scrape through what you can't this time. Read the paper Number Seven."

Kate Moore's nerves and senses were failing her now, as they well might. She saw behind this ruse of a mistake a plot of awful cleverness. It could come from but one mind—be carried out but for one motive. She was on the point of shrieking again, of calling out to Fletcher's face her thoughts, but it would be premature. She must be calm for a few instants, and hope that such a purpose—if it were a purpose—would fail of its own audacity.

"Number Seven, read the white handbill by the lantern!"

"Five hundred dollars will be paid for the discovery of the whereabouts of the black mare, Daylight"—[here came her description]—"stolen from me on Sunday night last by John Cairns, the horse theaf, lately escaped from —— county. Said Cairns may be traveling with her, and her markings be dyed. Said Cairns is about 25 years old, with dark hair and eyes, and generally changes his location by riding at night, and at present has a lady with him said to be his wife. He calls himself Dwyer. If discovered, said Cairns can wisely be hung on short notice by the gentlemen of the community before he begins to work.—[A. Jackson, Pilota, Neb."

"Do you hear that?" asked the head and front of the arresting party. "I guess you won't need to ask any more questions. Here's Jackson's nag, with her star on her forehead, the white forefoot covered with the usual stuff you gentlemen keep handy, and that little acid soon brings out all right. Your description's cor—rect, I fancy. It might be a looking-glass. Yonder's the lady. And you call yourself Dwyer, sure enough!—as you have ever since you came to these parts. More fool the men who didn't use their eyes, and put two and two together! Your last stealing in—— county was that trotter of the hotelkeeper in Harmony; and your first one, nearer here, has been just one too many—Jackson's mare. Have you got anything more to say for yourself?"

Dwyer could not contain himself. He could not yet discern the enemy's hand in the plot of audacious cunning; he had not seen Flether more than once in his short stay at Blue Fork. Dwyer fancied the whole matter now, indeed, a jest, but a startling mistake—one that, however, might be ludicrous under other conditions. But there was no doubt about the mare.

"I bought the mare three weeks ago in the safe at Oak Falls. The man who offered her to me was a stranger," he returned hotily. "If what you say is true—if it is Jackson's mare—he shall have her again as soon as I can get my wife to my house and send his horse to him."

"Rather careless to buy horses of strangers here—you know that, I guess," was the reply. "Have you got anything else to say that's not just brassing it out, Cairns?"

"What's the use of talking to a gang of fellows who will answer that I am somebody else, till I can prove it?"

"Oh! you can prove it, Cairns?"

"My name is not Cairns, though Cairns may have stolen this mare, and though my name may suit his taste to travel with. Let's settle this thing as soon as we can, for my wife's sake as well as my own."

"Look here! Does anybody deny that I am Kate Moore, the daughter of Lisha Moore, the blacksmith, at Blue Fork?" came Kate's voice. It had a ring of courage in it that was wonderful, and even now it brought a thrill of pride to her husband to think of having won a woman of such self-control! "At least, I was Kate Moore until I married Joe Dwyer this afternoon; and here we both are, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Dwyer, whoever else is here to face us down?"

"We don't know you, madam." Fletcher's sneering tone brought the blood into her face, even in the dark. Should she yet call the man by his name, to his masked face? No—not yet. "I believe lady of the name lives there, and—you're likely the same. I [illegible] you sat-isfied that the prisoner is John Cairns, the horse thief, and the person described in the poster?"

"We are."

"Are you satisfied that this is the animal described in the poster, stolen by him from Jackson of Pilota, and that it is in his possession here and now?"

"We are," came a firmer response.

"Is it unanimously agreed that the prisoner be hanged?"

"Ay! Hang him up! Up with him!" rose the profane chorus of reply.

"The sentence is passed on the prisoner," Fletcher continued. "Cairns, have you anything further to say for yourself?"

"Nothing but what I have said," replied Dwyer. "I am in your power, Fletcher."

"Let the prisoner speak with this lady, if he wants to," said his triumphant enemy. "Madam, if you move or cry out we shall give your husband no further chance."

Fletcher withdrew the grasp that had held Kate's hand. He leaned back out of the carriage on the left. Dwyer was allowed to approach Kate on the right, still held by strong hands. She leaned down to him—shivering, fainting, despairing almost, but not despairing altogether. Only a word or two passed between them, but those words were not of farewell. It was still dark, except for the stars.

She put out her hand softly—so softly—and as she did so she realized—or might have realized—that her heart had never in her life so stormily beaten. She felt Fletcher's waist. He did not perceive her touch or movement. It was all a chance. She won the chance.

She snatched the revolver out of his belt. He started up with an oath. She fired! The wretch called out, or groaned, or gasped—which, it matters not—and, vainly trying to save himself from falling, fell between the wheels. She fired to right—to left! It was all hit or miss. Dwyer clung to the buggy, the mare plunging, the return pistol shots cracking about their ears and their heads. The darkness—the suddenness of the resistance—the fall of Fletcher and of another man—had thrown everything around them in confusion. The mare kicked and leaped in terror and liberty. Dwyer was dragged like a sack of waist paper, his thighs between the wheels, his body shaken as if it would be broken; but he hung on. In a few seconds he was scrambling into the buggy. The mare had gained the road, and was galloping—bounding—snorting—careering, like the terrified creature she was. But she was on the road, and keeping it! Kate had fainted now. He held fast her helpless figure and himself on the seat with one hand and arm, and the revolver, that yet had four discharges, in the other. Brave Kate!—pearl of a wife!—your shots had told—each of them—and their fellows could be reserved. He did not try to find the rems that had fallen along the shafts. Let Chromo run—let Chromo run.

But their mounted pursuers were after them. How many were there ready for such a chase? Not more than three or four. The others had to get across to their horses and mount them in the dark and excitement. Still, the chasing was sure and swift. He heard the cries and the hoof beats, and a pistol shot at rando m. But he had the start of his pursuers. Chromo was trotting now, breaking occasionally, but not often, and that her trot was unmatchable in Nebraska she had already proved before that fateful night.

He turned and fired at the man that must be only a few yards behind him. He heard the horse fall with his rider. He had aimed low.

"Ah!" he cried, in his intense excitement and the stir of hope, "we have beaten them! Chromo—Chromo, old girl!—faster. Kate—my darling—we will beat them yet!"

But the cries and the hoof beats were increasing in clearness again behind him. Just then the moon shone out as he swung aroung a curve. A long, straight piece of the road through the pines lay ahead of fugitive and followers. Another group of mounted men were approaching, cheering and laughing loudly, and he heard a band of three or four instruments from somewhere in their midst—a wagon. He was riding straight into a company of his neighbors at Borden's Pond, come out from the settlement to meet the expected couple half-way and escort them home in a rude but hearty welcome!

He managed to check the mare, with their help. They thought it a runaway. Then when he and Kate were out of the wagon—no pursuing party come to try conclusions with the stalwart escort riding out so lustily from the Pond into a strange history that they listened to open-mouthed—and not before—Kate took her opportunity to faint, like any other woman—at last. Then Dwyer began explaining things.

They are living as happily as two people ever did or do, on the farm at the Pond to-day. But, of course, the Pond is "quite a place" by this time, and its earlier chronicles (none older than 15 years) sound like myths to the new generation there. The law could not surely enough trace out the partners in the assault on Dwyer. It was all evasion and trickery, though some three or four of the men at the mines quietly left the place before the noon of the day after the midnight convening of the vigilance committee. Fletcher had been instantly killed. Kate thinks of it with a shudder to-day, and one must not ask her for the story of her wedding trip behind Chromo. Dwyer is proud of the shot—though his manly face is grave as he says so. The veritable John Cairns ended his days and iniquities—so they happened to hear—in Montana, on (probably) just such a dwarfish pine tree as Dwyer might have been discovered swinging from the next day after his adventure. But "might" is a long word for a short one; and Dwyer thinks so as he smooths Chromo's coat. She is an old and undisturbed family dependent now on on the farm. He bought her of Jackson of Pilota. And so smoothing her and moving about her, Dwyer thinks over the chances of his life and happiness condensed into those few seconds that followed his being allowed to approach Kate, sitting there beside their malignant enemy. Then his face grows graver still; and he goes into the house and looks at his wife—and smiles soon, as she looks at him.—Cassell's Magazine.

YOUNG MEN.—Who have become victims of solitary vice, that dreadful and destructive habit, which annually sweeps to an untimely grave thousands of young men of exalted talent and brilliant intellect, may call with confidence.

DRS. FRANCE AND OTTMAN, after years of experience, have discovered the greatest cure known for weakness in the back and limbs, involuntary discharges, impotency, general debility, nervousness, langnor, confusion of ideas, palpitation of the heart, timidity, trembling, dizziness of sight, or gidiness, diseases of the head, throat, nose, or skin, affections of the liver, lungs, stomach, or bowels—those terrible disorders arising from the solitary vice of youth—and secret practices, blighting their most radiant hopes or anticipations, rendering marriage impossible. Take one candid thought before it is too late. A week or month may place your case beyond the reach of hope. Our method of treatment will speedily and permanently cure the most obstinate case, and absolutely restore perfect manhood.

TO MIDDLE-AGED MEN.—There are many from the age of 30 to 60 who are troubled with frequent evacuations of the bladder, often accompanied by a slight burning or smarting sensation, weakening the system in a manner the patient cannot account for. On examination of the urinary deposits, a ropy sediment will be found, or the color will be a thin or milkish hue. There are many men who die of this difficulty, ignorant of the cause, which is a second stage of seminal weakness. We will guarantee a perfect cure in all such cases, and a healthy restoration of the genito-urinary organs.

DISEASES OF WOMEN.—We have a special department, thoroughly organized, and devoted exclusively to the treatment of diseases of women. Every case consulting our specialists, whether by letter or in person, is given the most careful and considerate attention. Important cases, and we get few which have not baffled the skill of all the home physicians) have the benefit of a full council of skilled specialists. In treatment of diseases peculiar to females, our success has been marked, over two-thirds of our patients being ladies, old, young, married, single, rich and poor. Our method is entirely free from objectionable features of the general practitioner, namely, "Local treatment." We seldom find it necessary. We prepare remedies, constitutional and local, as the case demands, and instruct ladies how to treat themselves.

MARRIAGE.—Married persons, or young men contemplating marriage, aware of physical weakness, loss of power, or impediment, impotency, or any other disqualification, speedily restored.

PRIVATE DISEASES.—Blood Poison, Venereal Taint, Gleet, Stricture, Seminal Emissions, Loss of Sexual Power, Weakness of Sexual Organs, Want of Desire in Male or Female, whether from imprudent habits of youth or sexual habits of mature years, or any cause that debilitates the sexual functions, speedily and permanently cured. Consultation free and strictly confidential. Absolute cures guaranteed. Medicines sent free from observation to all parts of the United States.

EPILEPSY, OR FITS.—Positively cured by a new and never-failing method. Testimonials furnished.

FREE EXAMINATION OF THE URINE.—Each person applying for medical treatment should send or bring from 2 to 4 ounces of urine (that passed first in the morning preferred), which will receive a careful chemical and microscopical examination, and if requested a written analysis will be given.

Persons ruined in health by unlearned pretenders, who keep trifling with them month after month, giving poisonous and injurious compounds, should apply immediately. Delays are dangerous.

WONDERFUL CURES Perfected in old cases which have been neglected or unskillfully treated. No experiments or failures. Parties treated by mail or express, but where possible, personal consultation is preferred. Curable cases guaranteed. No risks incurred.

Cases and correspondence confidential. Treatment sent C. O. D. to any part of U. S. List of 130 questions free. Address, with postage, DR. FRANCE, Nos. 38 and 40 W. Gay St., Columbus, O.

Perfuming the Blood.

The other day a well-known Bond street beautifier showed and explained to me a new and wonderful process for perfuming the human body. By hypodermic injections of sweet essences, such as white rose, lilac, or violet, one's skin may be rendered as fragrant as that of Alexander the Great's. The little instrument used for making the injection is a syring of about the same size as that used for administering morphia. It will hold something like a half dozen drops of essence. The operation is painless, and one may do it for oneself with only the aid of one's right hand. It only needs to be performed once a week, as the perfume remains in the skin for that period. I was assured that there was no risk of blood-poisoning. The beautifier said that the fashionable ladies whom she waits on are delighted with the idea.

I had almost forgotten to mention the fact that the breath as well as the skin is rendered fragrant by the essence. Men will no doubt find it a handy receipt for counteracting the odors of tobacco smoke, which to some fastidious ladies is "so very objectionable." The little instrument, with scent bottle and needles all complete, can be had for 15 shillings. It was Dr. J. Rousell's experiments for the cure of phthisis that led to the discovery of the process. He used eucalyptus for his hypodermic injections, and the fact that the skin and breath of his patients became impregnated with its disagreeable odor caused him to try perfume as a remedy. —Pall Mall Budget.

A Chance for Book Manufacturers.

The job of preparing the poll-books under the new election law is one of some magnitude. Secretary of State Dan Ryan has made a request that all persons who have forms to submit for consideration should have the same at his office in Columbus not later than July 8, as he expects to make a choice on the 10th. There is no reason why Toledo bookmakers should not have a dip in this pie.

They will be taken in a few days to Mr. Ketcham's stock farm on Dorr street, where they will remain for the summer. They are the finest pair of animals ever brought to Toledo, and quite a number of horse fanciers who visited the stables this morning are loud in praise of Mr. Ketcham's latest purchase.

Harrison Lodge Christens the New Temple.

Over 200 ladies and gentlemen responded last evening to the invitations sent out by the committee on arrangements to appropriately celebrate the advent of Harrison lodge, No. 155, into the new Pythian castle. Everything was done to make the occasion one which would be remembered, and nothing transpired to mar the pleasures of the evening. Cards were indulged in for some time, and those who did not play spent the time in social conversation and admiring the beautiful new home. One of the most pleasant features of the evening was the presentation, in behalf of the lodge, of an elegant gold badge to the retiring chancellor commander, Mr. Wm. J. Prange, who has been among the faithful in anything having for its object the best interests of Harrison lodge. He responded in a feeling manner. A fine luach was served in the banquet room, and on the whole an enjoyable time was had.

Major McLyman Retires.

Last evening a transfer of the customs office for the Miami district was made from Major W. H. McLyman to Judge D. R. Austin, and the new collector is at the helm to-day. During Mr. McLyman's term, which lasts four years and 40 days, the sum of $217,135 has been collected in fees. The office has been conducted in a business-like manner, no unfavorable comment of any character having been indulged in, and Mr. McLyman retires with a knowledge on his part that the office has been administered in such a manner as to meet the commendation of all who have had any relation with it. Judge Austin cannot hope for a better record. Mr. McLyman has not determined as to his future course, but he will undoubtedly engage in business here. The best wishes of the public will be with him for success.

Watch Trust Running Down.

NEW YORK, July 1.—The World says that the watch trust is going to pieces. The combination was formed in 1885. The first defection from the ironclad agreement to maintain prices was by the Dueber watch case company, two years ago. Two weeks ago Koch & Dreyfus, a large Maiden Lane firm, who were to be blacklisted for cutting prices, obtained an injunction against such action on the part of the trust. Joseph Fahys & Co. have since been expelled for cutting rates. The meeting at which this was done was a stormy one and revealed a weakness in the organization. Fahys has applied to the courts and the trust may be legally broken up if it does not fall to pieces.

THE LATE MRS. FORD.

Resolutions of Respect to Her Memory from Co-Workers.

The Protestant hospital trustees have adopted the following memorial on the death of Mrs. J. D. Ford:

"By the sad and untimely death of Mrs. J. D. Ford, this board is again so soon called upon to mourn the loss of one of its members.

"Mrs. Ford, although in years and term of service, one of our youngest members, has won our admiration and respect by the beauty of her character no less than by the powers of mind which rendered her our efficient co-worker. Her personal and moral beauty charmed all with whom she came in contact while a mere intimate acquaintance showed strength and nobility of character and purpose enhancing the grace of her presence. Not as the ripened grain in complete fruition, but as the flowers in full blossom, as the mature yet youthful life, filled with sweetness, use, beauty, and promise—do we mourn her.

"Our hearts sympathize with her bereaved husband and her sorrowing friends. But this memorial be spread upon our records and a copy thereof be transmitted to the family of the departed and beloved one."

Resolutions were passed as follows by the members of the Ladies' Aid Association:

"For the third time since the organization of this association, the board of directors find a vacant chair at their meeting, caused by the sudden passing away of Mrs. J. D. Ford from the seen into the unseen world.

"Deeply conscious of the loss sustained, it is therefore

"Resolved, That in the death of their co-worker and friend, the members of this board feel that there has gone from them what cannot be restored; they desire to bear loving testimony to her womanly virtues, her earnestness in well doing, her ever ready sympathy and her bright helpfulness wherever and whenever her aid was needed. They also wish to offer their tender sympathy, to the mourning husband and friends so early bereft of their dearly loved one."

A NEW WONDERLAND.

Scenery and Color Amid the Icebergs and Forests of Alaska.

Besides the tranquil landscapes, the archipelago, with its countless and multiform islands, the gray crag-borderee fjords, the Pacific expanses and coniferous forests, the snow-capped 15,000-feet mountains, with glaciers broad enough and long enough to cover a national territory, besides the icebergs, there is another marvel in Alaska. It is color—color such as the artist can never find on his palette in which to dabble his impotent brush. Nature here is the all-powerful colorist, and she ravishes the beholder. The greens, the blues, the browns of Alaskan waters—who can describe them, or the shades of colorings in these same forests, grays and greens in multitudinous varieties? A walk through one of these forests varnished with dew reveals a tangle of greens with bushes adorned with vivid coral berries strung in rosaries or massed in bunches. No tropical forest could exceed the coloring here shown. Every gray that the eye could see or the imagination conceive is displayed in the beetling crags and cliffs, and these dusky colors change from moment to moment and when the sun casts its last or its earliest rays upon them, enveloping them in a roseate hue, you think a miracle has been wrought, and you are transfixed in the transfiguration which has taken place. The sky—the Alaskan sky—is a revelation of color. Let it be sullen with foggy grays, let it be clear with sapphire calmness—so clear that a mountain miles and miles away looks so near that it would seem that you would only have to stretch out your hand to touch it—let it be painted with the sunset colors, gorgeous in the pomp of purple and red and gold, fading, fading in the long lingering summer twilight—fading into the most entrancing shades of primrose, sulphur and greenish yellow, and then almost to white, which deepens and deepens until the jeweled stars look out and the aurora flashes her electric streamers in pulsating bands of light, which, reaching far up toward the zenith, change to delicate hues of pink and weird unearthly blues—and you will say each is more remarkable than

We'll write it down till everybody sees it;

Till everybody is sick of seeing it;

Till everybody knows it without seeing it—that Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cures the worst cases of chronic catarrh in the head, catarrhal headache, and "cold in the head." In perfect faith, its makers, the World's Dispensary Medical Association of Buffalo, N. Y., offers to pay $500 to any one suffering from chronic catarrh in the head whom they cannot cure.

Now if the conditions were reversed—if they asked you to pay $500 for a positive cure you might hesitate. Here are reputable men, with years of honorable dealing; thousands of dollars and a great name back of them and they say—"We can cure you because we've cured thousands of others like you—if we can't we will pay you $500 for the knowledge that there's one whom we can't cure."

They believe in themselves. Isn't it worth a trial? Isn't any trial preferable to catarrh?

The Venice of America,

Is the Star Island house situated on Lake St. Clair, only 30 miles from Detroit and 90 miles distant from Toledo. It certainly is entitled to the distinction of being the scene of summer resorts. It was the good fortune of a BEE to stop off at this beautiful place while out on the Star-Cole line of steamers recently, and we can truthfully say that Star Island and its great hotel and surroundings make a most delightful place to spend your vacation or summer outing. The hotel which has always been a very popular place, has been handsomely refitted and elegantly furnished, with broad verandas, together with shaded lawns afford beautiful promenades in full view of the constantly passing steamers and vessels. This panorama of marine views cannot be excelled in the Great Northwest. The grounds are beautifully laid out with flowers and foliage plants, while the waters splash merrily in the summer sunbeams, while a large basin in the center of the grounds contains specimens of fish and wild water fowl sporting in the cool and spring-like waters, and for outdoor amusements there is a fine fleet of toe best sail yachts and row boats for boating and fishing, and right here the writer can say that this is a veritable paradise for the fisherman, for in the cool waters of the lake and St. Clair river they have all the finest specimens of pickerel, perch, black bass, muscalonge and white fish; also the famous small-mouthed black bass, which are the gamiest of their species. Fishing tackle, minnows and experienced boatmen, familiar with the best fishing grounds, are always at hand. The waters of this lake and river have become a very popular place for the sportsman, for it is acknowledged to be the best place for duck shooting and fishing there is in the northwest. Among the thousands of people who frequent this place may be found the best families of the southern states, who return to their homes at the close of the summer season to sing the praises of Star Island to their neighbors and friends.

Certainly no one can spend any time at this popular resort, while Mr. James Slocum is in charge, without being perfectly satisfied with their treatment and care, for he is in every respect an able man for the place—gentlemanly and courteous to all, while his years of experience as a hotel manager is a sufficient guarantee that the house, with its 100 guest rooms and dining room accommodations for 600 people, will be properly conducted and the wants of the inner man can and will be fully satisfied. It will be very gratifying to the thousands of readers of the BEE to know that this place can be reached in a half day's ride from Toledo by taking the Michigan Central 5:35 a. m. train, which gives you one hour in Detroit before boarding the elegant Star-Cole line of steamers which will land you safely at this great hostelry in time for your dinner. The settlement of the position of the French accent was recently attempted in France by means of the phonautograph, the measurement of the record being made by a tuning fork. It was found that even in the shortest syllables the ear is capable of not only hearing the tone, but of detecting fine shades and differences in the mode of pronunciation.

Nobility in the Kitchen.

There is a swell Italan restaurant up town that boasts of two Italian noblemen and an accomplished Italian man of letters as being on its staff of waiters. A gentleman who was Italian born and lived in that country until he came to the years of maturity happened into this restaurant to dine one day. He was astonished to be waited upon by a man who had been one of his schoolmates in Italy and whom he had afterward known as for many years a professor of Latin in one of the Italian universities. It was the old story with this man, as he explained to his whilom school-mate. He had given up his professorship and come to this country in the hopes of bettering his fortunes, only to be disappointed and finally to be driven to waiting on tables as the only employment open to him. In the same restaurant, he said, there was a marquis and a count who had been students in the university when he was a professor there. These two scions of noble families had come to this country after having run through in dissipation what little patrimonies had come to them, and after knocking about from one thing to another had come down to their present low estate.—New York Recorder.

Palimpsests.

In times when paper was unknown and skins practically were the only substances available for writing, and were scarce and correspondingly expensive, the would-be scribe was forced to fall back for his supply of parchment upon older books which had become obsolete, or in his opinion, contained matter of less importance than that which he intended to commit to writing. A practice was therefore initiated of removing the characters first written by washing off the old ink, or more mechanically by scraping the parchment with a knife, thus in some measure repeating the original process of preparing the skin for use by rubbing it with pumice stone. The surface of parchment which had been subjected to treatment of this nature, especially if subsequently polished, would not show any traces of the first writing, and was again available for use. Thus arose a class of manuscript known as "codices rescripti," rewritten books; or, as "palimpsests," literally, "again rubbed," books. The practice, as originally followed out, has given rise to but little inconvenience; for the ancient booksellers were good judges and took care never to destroy a valuable treatise, but only obliterated such works as had no sale in the limited literary market of the ancient world.

Frequently references to palimpsests occur in the classical authors. Cicero laughingly alludes to the parismony of his friend Trebatius the jurisconsult, who, to write a letter, erased some previous communication, and Plutarch, in his treatise upon the "Conversations of Princes and Philosophers," laments the failure of Plato's visit to Cicily, and compares Dionysius of Syracuse to an old book from which the writing has been erased, but which is still defaced by the ancient stains, which can never be completely removed, appearing under the newly written characters. Ulpian, the great jurist, states that a will can be either on fresh paper, or on paper which has been used previously ("charta deleticia"), or on the back of paper the face of which is already occupied, and that property can be claimed under a will so written. Gaius, Martial and Catullus also refer to palimpsests, the allusions in the epigrams of the latter being to paper or parchment so prepared that authors could easily revise and correct their work.—Chambers' Journal.

The Ohio Military academy, of Portsmouth, under the care of Col. A. L. Bresler, is certain to occupy one of the highest positions as an educational institution. Col. A. L. Bresler, the superintendent, was in Germany on the staff of the crown prince for four years, and as a disciplinarian and educator, he is without a peer in the United States. Pupils sent to him will receive not only a thorough military education, but also a thorough education in any of the regular literary and scientific courses. The grounds and elegant buildings are well adapted to the purpose for which they are intended. Parents desiring a first-class school for their boys can do no better than to put them under the care of Col. A. L. Bresler.

A QUEER SPANISH CUSTOM.

Why the Crews of Men-of-War Always Go Aloft at Sundown.

The presence of the Spanish schoolship Nautilus in the North river recalls a curious custom in vogue on war vessels of that nationality. It originated in superstition and has long been the subject of many jeers from English-speaking mariners.

Years ago, so the legand runs, a Spanish man-of-war was lost under peculiar circumstances. The ship was careening before a Levant breeze, when suddenly the heavens grew dark with an approaching squall. It became necessary to shorten sail quickly and the seamen were hurried to their positions. The vessel heeled under her bellying canvas, but not a sheet would start.

As a last resort the halyards were cut, and under ordinary circumstances the yards would have fallen upon the caps and spilled the wind out of the sails. But they remained mast-headed, and in a few moments the vessel capsized. It was afterward discovered that the sheaves, through which the ropes for shortening sails were rove, had been so tightly plugged up with sticks and other small obstructions that it was impossible for the ropes to slide through. It was urged that no human agency could have done it, and the deed was laid at the door of the evil one.

Shortly after the fateful occurrence a general order was promulgated directing that the crew of every Spanish war vessel be sent aloft to chase His Majesty out of the sheave holes every evening at sundown.

From that day to the present it has been the custom of the crew to go aloft for this purpose when the colors are lowered at sunset. They scramble up the rigging as the flag comes down, run out upon the yardarm and closely examine every hole and crevice. Their patient search for the elusive old gentleman has hitherto been as fruitless as that instituted by single ladies under beds for long lost burglars.

What would happen if they should ever find what they search for can only be imagined.—N. Y. Times.

Edison's First Marriage.

The story of Edison's first marriage shows how completely he is dominated by the experimenting fever. He had never thought of getting married, but when some of his friends urged upon him the advisability of taking a wife he assented and said that if they would find a nice girl he would marry her. He finally picked out a pleasant-faced girl from his factory and asked her to marry him. She consented and Edison agreed to leave his beloved laboratory for a day's wedding trip. On the way from the chapel in which they were married to the railway station the carriage passed the laboratory. The temptation was too much. Edison stopped the carriage and telling the bride that he would follow her to the station in time to catch the train, he plunged into some experiment that had occurred to him during the church services. Hour after hour passed. The poor bride waited all the afternoon in the station and was driven back to the house. It was 11 o'clock at night before his assistants could tear Edison away from his laboratory and get him home. When he is at work Edison loses all count of time. He will keep the whole establishment on a rush for hours at a stretch and seems astonished when any one hints that it might be well to get something to eat; he is capable of working all day and night without showing fatigue.—Chicago Journal.

HABITS OF POPE LEO.

He Carries to the Extreme Limit His Observance of Church Laws.

Every day about 8 or 9 o'clock in the evening, according to the season, the Pope recites the rosary with Mgr. Angeli, his private secretary, and one of the priests of the household. In all religious exercises Leo XIII. bears a serious, dignified and imposing attitude. I have rarely seen masses celebrated with such profound and heartfelt piety. The priest is divined in the highest acceptation of the word in Leo XIII. He carries out to a scruple the laws of the church. It is known that a Catholic priest should celebrate mass fasting, but this is a law of discipline which the Pope, owing to illness, has a right to dispensate from.

In fact, only lately Leo XIII. has accorded this dispensation to two cardinals, and has allowed them to celebrate mass after having partaken of liquid food; but if it occurs that in the morning an illness or an indisposition obliges him to take a cup of milk or broth, Leo XIII., notwithstanding the supreme powers of which he is the sovereign dispenser, abstains that day from celebrating mass. After the rosary, Leo XIII. partakes of a light breakfast composed of eggs, vegetables and fruit, and then enters his private apartments; it is seldom he retires before 11 o'clock. His excessive nervousness occasions him frequent sleeplessness; he then rises and walks about his room reading and meditating. At times an idea strikes him, and he rouses his secretary and dictates to him.—Review of Reviews.
